U. S. Workers Await Order Today Giving Pay Cut Relief

President Expected to Restore Part of 15 Per Cent Slash.

Living Cost Report May Bring Action

Analysis Due to Rest on Roosevelt's Desk This Morning.

President Roosevelt will announce, probably today, restoration of some percentage of the Federal pay cut affecting almost a million persons in Government employ, it was believed last night.

The voluminous report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, rushed to the President last Saturday, was returned for more detailed analysis yesterday morning, preliminary to announcement of a decision, anxiously awaited.

Resulting delays prevented the President from acting on the report yesterday, but from all indications he will issue an executive order today. This, there was every reason to believe, will return in part the wage cut instituted last July 1.

From all indications, President Roosevelt is ready to act on the report. All that deterred him yesterday was believed to be the need for closer analysis of the cost-of-living figures and actual preparation of an executive order.

Report Due Today.

Dr. Isadore Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, and Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget, were busy whipping the report in final form during the day. Officials at the Labor Department attempted to complete it by nightfall, but later said it would be ready this morning.

Under the economy act, the first six months of 1928 are taken as the base period to which the cost of living in each six months is compared. The President is authorized to act within a 15 per cent range in accordance with the rise or fall of living costs during each subsequent half-year.

Inasmuch as prices, generally, have risen during the last six months, speculation among Government employes has been rife as to what percentage of the salary cut would be restored. Figures chiefly mentioned have been close to 5 per cent, which would be effective until July 1.

The act instituting the pay cut expires June 30. Congress may return to its own distretion the salaries of Federal employes, which many members believe have been reduced too much, or an attempt may be made to continue its provisions in effect.

Report Closely Guarded.

The report itself, which contains no recommendations, has been so closely guarded there has been no intimation at either the White House or the Labor Department as to what its figures showed. In its preparation the prices of essentials have been stressed.

Meantime, a move to enlist a complete unity of the residents of Washington behind the movement

Speeding Auto Halted by Stork

Woman of Culpeper Gives Birth to Son en Route to Hospital.

Baltimore, Jan. 2 (AP).—The stork overtook an expectant mother in a little sedan just after it skidded to a stop in front of a State police station a few miles outside of Baltimore today.

Sergt. Charles Blizzard, in charge, was fixing a flat tire when the sedan driver jumped out, shouting: "Hey! Hey! A woman in my car is going to have a baby!"

"Yeah," said Blizzard, "better get her to a hospital."

"No time," shouted the driver. "It's going to be born in a few minutes."

"My gosh!" exclaimed Blizzard, leaping for the station door and phoning for an ambulance.

Then for several minutes two women inside the car did what they could for Mrs. Esther Jackson, of Culpeper, Va., already the mother of four. Then one of the women poked her head out of the sedan window.

"It's a boy," she announced.

Mrs. Jackson was being rushed to a Baltimore hospital when the birth occurred. Her friends decided that to continue the trip would now be useless so, riding in the ambulance that arrived belatedly, she was taken back to Frederick, Md., where she has been visiting a sister.

Valuable Oils Lost in Fire.

Ottawa, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Valuable paintings, including Van Dyke's "The Angels' Choir," worth $200,000, and Frank Bangwyn's "The Late Arrival" were destroyed in a fire today at the home of John Gleeson, wealthy patron of the arts.

Woodin Extends Wish for Success Of Treasury Head

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday received this telegram of congratulations from his predecessor in the Treasury, William H. Woodin:

"My great affection and congratulations to you, my dear Henry, and that you will make a great success is the sincerest wish of William H. Woodin."

Morgenthau read the telegram at a press conference.

Storm-Ravaged Zone Rebuilds As Toll Mounts

70 Believed Dead in Flood and More Bodies Are Sought.

Los Angeles, Jan. 2 (AP).—An army of 5,000 workmen began the rehabilitation of the flood-stricken lowlands near here today while mounted deputy sheriffs hunted through miles of mud and debris for the bodies of victims. The tentative death list lengthened to a possible 70.

The search centered in the desolated Montrose-La Crescenta section, which felt the greatest fury of the most disastrous flood in this region since the breaking of the big St. Francis Dam 40 miles north of Los Angeles in 1928, causing a loss of approximately 450 lives.

Thirty-six bodies, 24 of them identified, were reported recovered; 37 persons still were on the list of missing and 7 were dead as the result of traffic accidents in the storm. Authorities said the missing list might include the 12 unidentified dead.

Thousands Are Homeless.

An enormous job confronted the rehabilitation army, formed from men of the Civil Works lists, the forestry camps, American Legion Posts, Red Cross Chapters and county employes.

Thousands of homeless had to be sheltered. Roads buried deeply under silt and debris had to be cleared and the wreckage of hundreds of homes and other buildings remained to be cleaned up.

An appeal to Deputy Public Administrator Henry M. Waite in Washington for an immediate review of the county's application for $33,000,000 in flood control funds was sent by County Supervisor Hugh A. Thatcher. He estimated the damage at several million dollars.

State road machinery and workmen were placed at the disposal of the county by Gov. Rolph, who flew here today and made a preliminary survey.

Damage Up to Million.

Most of the families who evacuated 1,500 homes in the Ballona Creek watershed between Culver City and Venice were able to return today. Approximately 2,000 homes were damaged in that area, but none of them were crushed and splintered, as many were in the Montrose section by torrents shooting down canyons and normally dry washes.

At Glendale, between here and Montrose, the damage was estimated to be at least $1,000,000.

Unprecedented in the 57 years that weather records have been kept here, the storm, starting Friday midnight, brought 8.27 inches of rain at Los Angeles. The fall was even greater in the foothills, the Town of Duarte registering 15.86 inches.

'Frisco Trolley Tunnel Brings Motorist Grief

San Francisco, Jan. 2 (AP).—The first automobile trip through the mile-long Twin Peaks street car tunnel brought Lindsay Warford, former University of San Francisco football player, a reckless driving charge here today.

Warford finished the trip over the ties in the unpaved tunnel minus his rear tires and leading a long procession of street cars, which were 20 minutes behind schedule when a waiting wrecking car pulled the automobile from the tracks.

U. S. to Use 25 Millions Buying Land

Revolutionary Plan Is Aimed to Retire 1-7 of Farm Acreage.

Tugwell Scheme Given Roosevelt Approval; PWA Funds Ready.

By Raymond Clapper.

The Administration is about to launch a revolutionary land policy which contemplates purchase of millions of acres of poor farm land to be taken out of active cultivation and returned to forest or other non-crop status.

Announcement is expected shortly in the form of an allotment of possibly $25,000,000 from the Public Works Administration. This money will be used as a starter in the buying up of weak farms by the Government. Ultimately, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace estimates, 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 acres will be thus purchased, and tucked away in the vast Government-owned domain.

The policy has been approved by President Roosevelt, who experimented with the idea while governor of New York.

New Victory for Tugwell.

Transactions will be handled through the Surplus Relief Corporation. This corporation was formed in Delaware last October initially to deal in surplus foodstuffs needed for Federal relief. But the charter is so broad that almost any operation can be undertaken. It has been decided to use this new agency as a vehicle rather than to add another one to the existing multitude of alphabetical weapons of recovery.

The decision to go ahead on this plan represents another victory for Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, the star of the "brain trust," who has become a dominating force in the Administration. Throughout his spectacular post-professorial career, this adventurous young economist has felt that the Federal Government must reverse its land policy.

Pioneer Program Reversed.

During the pioneer days every incentive was offered to colonize the vast open spaces to the West. The Government gave land away to anyone who would settle on it. Even after the best land had been taken, and the reason for the policy had disappeared, it still persisted and thousands of farmers have been induced to settle on soil from which the most expert agriculturalist could no twrest a living. Millions of Government money were pumped into irrigation and reclamation projects on which the carrying charges sometimes exceeded the total value of the crops produced.

Under the impact of the depression, the economic planning group began to insist that it would be cheaper to buy much of this land back than to go on indefinitely subsidizing farmers to produce wheat, corn, hogs and cotton for which there were no customers. As a temporary expedient, the AAA attempted to cut down crops by paying the farmers directly for planting less. This was frankly regarded as a stop gap pending the

Man's Body Found In Sewage Tank

Suspected Murder Probed at U. S. Hospital.

Denver, Jan. 2 (AP).—Believed by authorities to have been slain and his body thrown in a septic tank at Fitzsimons Government Hospital here, the death of a man, tentatively identified as William W. White, 41, of Red Cliff, Colo., was being investigated today.

William Smith, caretaker, found the body and notified Lieut. Joseph Carmack, officer of the day at the hospital, who called police.

Private Thomas M. Shields, stationed at the hospital, was questioned by the authorities, who quoted him as saying he left the hospital grounds with White Saturday and still had $300 which White gave him to hold for him.

Athletics Official Lashes Back At Wallace for College Attack

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace's attack on college football, branding it a "racket," was answered tonight by Maj. John L. Griffith, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

"Secretary Wallace may be an authority on pigs, cows and corn, but it is a question as to whether his training in the field of agriculture qualifies him to speak with authority on educational subjects, including college athletics," Maj. Griffith said.

"After all, college athletics are entitled to scientific treatment, and a man who gives his opinion that college football is a 'racket' apparently has not taken time to gather the facts on which to base his conclusion.

"Secretary Wallace may be correct in his belief that prosperity is to be achieved through scarcity, but at any rate, until his various economics have been proven, it might be pertinent to suggest he leave the field of college athletics to those who know the difference between a racket and college athletics as administered in this country.

"It might further be suggested that the Secretary has an opportunity as an educator to limit his lectures to such subjects as birth control, delivered to those members of the porcine family that have been manifesting their belief in rugged individualism and the right of self-expression.

"If college athletics are rackets and the college coaches racketeers, what definition expresses the average American's conception of politics and politicians?

"Unfortunately, or fortunately, the newspapers are read by women and children, and adequate definitions of politicians can not be expressed in public print."

Halt Urged On PWA Aid To U. S. Units

Transfer of Funds for Unapproved Jobs Under Fire.

House Leaders to Seek Limit in Shifting Relief Cash.

A movement to stop allocation of Public Works millions to Government departments already provided for by Congress was launched yesterday by Representative James P. Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

He charged $2,225,000,000 has been allocated to various Government agencies by the Public Works Administration, a large slice of which was for projects Congress had specifically turned down.

Leaders Are Enlisted.

Enlisting the aid of House Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrns, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, and others, Chairman Buchanan will introduce legislation placing definite limitations on the disposition of future Public Works appropriations.

"I don't believe in this Government maintaining two appropriations committees," he said. "That is just what it is doing, with Congress making one set of appropriations, and the Public Works Board making another, by allocation of funds to departments."

"There have been numerous instances where they have transferred money for projects that Congress previously had turned down."

Representative Buchanan said he has no objection to allocations for projects "clearly worth while" but intends to do all in his power to stop the practice of "overriding the will of Congress" by providing funds for activities Congress has condemned.

Representative Woodrum, chairman of the Independent Offices appropriations subcommittee, and House Democrat Leader Byrns said they were inclined to agree with Representative Bucharan's contention.

Cites Fund Transfer.

"It leaves the Appropriations Committee, which spends weeks in studying the needs of the various departments, providing the amount of money it thinks necessary, in the position of performing a purely perfunctory service," Representative Woodrum said.

As illustrating the type of Public Works allocation objected to, Representative Buchanan cited the transfer of $800,000 to the Justice Department for erection of buildings for prison employes.

He said the proposal was put up to the last Congress and was voted down, members feeling it was not up to the Government to provide living quarters for employes of prisons. On the contrary, he said, members felt it was not to the best interest of the employes themselves to house their families in a prison environment.

Representative Buchanan said other thousands have been allocated to the Public Health Service for extermination of mosquitos, a project Congress repeatedly has rejected.

Road Costs Huge.

Probably the largest allocations not authorized by Congress were the transfer of $450,000,000 to the Agriculture Department for construction of forest roads and trails and public land highways, and $67,000,000 made available to the Treasury for the public buildings program.

The House Appropriations Committee chairman said he took no issue with these allocations, as they were for "worthy" projects that put men to work and not conflict with the express will of Congress.

Representative Buchanan said his proposed limitation on further Public Works allotments to Government agencies, where they run counter to the wishes of the House or Senate, probably will be offered as a rider to the emergency appropriation measure providing additional funds for recovery program.

The full House Appropriations Committee will not meet until next Monday, when one of the three supply measures now completed will be passed on—the Independent offices, Interior and Treasury-Post-office bills. The Independent offices bill in all probability will be the first apropriation bill reported to the House.

Bond Forger Gets 635-Year Sentence

Term Follows Guilty Plea by Kansas Broker.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 2 (AP).—Ronald Finney, central figure in the Kansas Million dollar bond scandal who pleaded guilty to 31 counts charging bond forgery, was sentenced late today to a penitentiary term totaling 31 to 635 years.

Sentence was pronounced by District Judge Paul M. Heinz, who overruled a defense request to withdraw the plea of guilty. State attorneys joined in this request in the event the 15-year sentence previously agreed upon by both sides was not imposed.

Finney's attorneys served notice he would appeal.

Roosevelt to Give Congress Message in Person Today; Tariff Rule Battle Impends

Gavels Poised for Opening of Congress Today

Joint Session Indicated by Plans; All Passes Are Recalled.

Open War Threat Voiced by G. O. P.

Couzens, Other Leaders Oppose More Power for Executive.

By Franklyn Waltman, jr.

Preparations were made last night for President Roosevelt to deliver in person his message opening the first regular session of the Seventy-third Congress, which convenes at noon today.

Whether Mr. Roosevelt will follow the custom of his Democratic predecessor, Woodrow Wilson, by addressing a joint session of House and Senate, however, was not certain. The White House explained no decision had been made and that perhaps the weather might influence the President's plans.

The most significant preparation made was the construction of a ramp into the House wing of the Capitol so that Mr. Roosevelt could avoid the steps. In addition, all House gallery cards were recalled and special passes good only for tomorrow issued, one for each Senator and Representative. Joint sessions of Congress take place in the House chamber.

All Ready for Sesson.

Everything on Capitol Hill was in readiness for the new session, which the Democratic leaders predicted would be unique for the harmonious and expeditious handling of legislation. Yet late in the day a dark cloud in the shape of a proposal to give the President authority to negotiate, without need of Senate ratification, reciprocal tariff treaties, appeared to disrupt this proclaimed harmony.

Although it is not yet known whether Mr. Roosevelt will seek such power, the Senate Democratic steering committee at its initial meeting discussed the plan and decided that within limitations it would be a proper delegation of authority to the President.

Immediately the Republicans served notice they would resist to the utmost the conferring of power so wide and so contrary to their party's allegiance to tariff protection. Senator Charles McNary, Senate Republican leader, said his party would fight that proposal every step of the way.

Couzens Also Opposed.

Senator James Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, said that although he intends to support the President's program, he could not agree to the reciprocal tariff scheme. But the strongest blast came from Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), of Iowa. He said conferring such power on the President would make him an "absolute dictator of the Nation's international trade and its industrial life."

Senator Dickinson announced that not only would he fight against giving the President such power, but that he would introduce a bill to repeal the NRA act, which he termed "unworkable, not beneficial and a handicap to recovery."

"The NRA as now constituted has been the biggest aid to monopolies ever imposed in this country," the Iowan added. "It is ruining the lit-

U. S. Protests German Bond Interest Slash

Dodd Gets Instructions After Payment Cut to 30% Cash.

By Kendall Foss.

Exercised over Germany's recent decision to still further reduce actual interest payments to holders of German bonds outside the Reich, the State Department yesterday instructed Ambassador William E. Dodd to make representations approximating a protest.

The British government has already lodged a similar protest in Berlin.

The decision, taken by the Reichsbank on December 18, permits payment in cash of only 30 per cent of the interest due in the next six months. The remaining 70 per cent is to be paid in scrip redeemable at half its face value. Hitherto, the division of cash and scrip was on a 50-50 basis.

Neither the interest nor amortization on the Dawes loan, nor the interest on the Young loan, were affected by the Reichsbank's decision. The new regulations apply, however, to all other long and medium term obligations assumed by the German government. Short term credits fall in still another category and are covered by the famous "stand still" agreement, up for renewal and modification this month.

Particularly displeasing to this government is the one-sided character of the Reichsbank's decision; it is generally felt here that when circumstances force a debtor tempor-

Indiana Mayor Swims On Jan. 1 and Proves It

Wabash, Ind., Jan. 2 (AP).—Mayor Homer Schowalter today had motion pictures to prove he took his tenth annual New Year's Day swim in Long Lake.

The annual swim was started by a wager between Schowalter and his father-in-law, John Morrow.

New Orleans Primary Finally Set for Jan. 23

New Orleans, Jan. 2 (AP).—The Orleans Parish Democratic committee today formally set the New Orleans mayorally primary for January 23, and issued a strict ban against the use of dummy candidates by any faction in the race.

The committee, controlled by the old regular organization headed by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, selected the previously indicated January 23 primary date without a hitch and decreed the filing of all candidacies by January 12.

32 Teachers Strike, Demanding Back Pay

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 2 (AP).—Demanding part of all of the 6½ months' back salary due them, the 32 school teachers in nearby Mayfield Borough went on strike today and the schools did not open after the holiday vacation.

More than 1,100 pupils were effected by the action of the teachers, who asserted that they would not return until given at least a portion of the back pay.

Freak Disturbance Causes Niagara To Flow Deep Red

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Jan. 2 (AP).—Niagara Falls on the American side flowed a dark red today.

Apparently because of some disturbance up river, instead of the familiar sea green curtain from the edge of the falls to the mass of foam below, there was a curtain like red velvet. The color changed during the night.

The water over the Horseshoe Falls on the Canadian side was much darker than usual, but the red was not so noticeable.

Japanese Peril Alarms Italy

Naval Activity in East Stirs Warning on Floor of Chamber.

Rome, Jan. 2 (AP).—Alarm or the "menace" of Japanese naval activities and recent policies was expressed today in the Italian budget committee's report on navy expenditures, distributed in the Chamber of Deputies.

"Japan today invades China—inspired by race hatred, she will plan tomorrow against white men," said the Marquis Giacomo Medici del Vascello, the committee reporter, in revealing Italy's naval budget of 98,731,000 lire for 1934-1935, (about $7,898,480, is 14,536,000 lire under the current year.

Referring to Japan's naval activities, the marquis declared that "the groundwork for this future danger from the East is perhaps being laid.

"It was revealed in Japan's recent policies and diplomacy, including her withdrawal from the League of Nations. This gesture is of great importance and is highly significant and menacing."

Citing American, British, and Japanese naval building programs, Vascello said 1934 brings a resumption of a race for naval armaments in preparation for the treaty expirations.

He said the Washington and London pacts never accomplished the purpose of arresting naval rivalry of Japan and the United States.

Pineville, Ky., Jan 2 (AP).—Larkin Baker was held in jail here today charged with dynamiting the home of M. S. Parrait and attempting to kill Lawrence Dwyer, a United Mine Workers representative.

China Rebels Menace Lives Of Foreigners

Troops Sweep to Within Four Miles of Capital.

Peiping, China, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Rebel troops advanced within 4 miles of Peiping tonight as war flared anew across north China, endangering foreign lives and property in the Peiping-Tientsin area below the Great Wall.

The Chinese government issued a communique announcing the forces led by the insurgent leader, Gen. Liu Kwei-Tang, were encamped at Yu Chia-Wei, within sight of Peiping's walls, to the east.

The Thirty-second route army and the 105th division of loyal troops were ordered to attack in the morning.

Three Towns Looted.

Gen. Ho Ying-Ching, Nanking's commander in north China, issued a supplementary communique declaring that Gen. Liu's men had sacked three towns north of Peiping in the last few days.

Gen. Wan Fu-Lin, field commander of the loyal troops, sought to halt the advance of the Liu troops, estimated at 8,000 men, and forced the main contingent to retreat to the town of Niulanshan, inside the demilitarized zone below the wall—a zone into which Chinese forces may not proceed under the terms of the Tangku truce signed last May with the Japanese.

The Japanese kept in close touch with the new fighting. A warning was understood to have been sent Chinese authorities declaring that unless the warfare was checked, the Japanese would exercise their rights under the Tangku agreement and send a punitive expedition into the troubled area to enforce order.

Police Force Mobilized.

Gen. Ho was understood to be mobilizing semimilitary police forces which can operate in the restricted zone, in an effort to check the Liu rebellion and prevent another Japanese invasion of Chinese territory.

U. S. Minister Nelton T. Johnson kept informed through United States military and naval sources and Chinese military headquarters, but so far has made no formal move to concentrate American citizens in the foreign legation quarter here, a quarter well guarded under the treaties following the Boxer rebellion at the opening of this century.

Police Dash Up Just in Time To Help Culprit Get Away!

A neatly dressed man walked into Spire's Pharmacy, College Park, Md., early yesterday and handed Clerk W. E. Beers a $10 bill in payment for cigarettes. A $10 counterfeit bill had been passed at Hyattsville a few minutes earlier.

One look convinced Beers the bill was bogus. He sauntered to the rear of the store and quickly conferred with Dr. Hugh S. Cawthorne, manager. A hurry call was put in for county police at Hyattsville.

But county police were being entertained by a radio in their station. Time was consumed shutting off the radio. The "counterfeiter" had become suspicious and prepared to leave in an automobile that waited, with a driver.

Beers dashed outside with his rifle, which he kept in the rear of the store. The men were driving off. He pulled the trigger. The gun failed to fire.

Again he cocked the piece and pulled the trigger. Again the gun failed to fire. There was a screaming of sirens. The police! In a flash Beers was overpowered. A big police sergeant shouted, "We've got 'im!"

The counterfeiters escaped.

Eastern Shore Pair Rearrested

Print Study in Woman's Death Puts Father, Son in Jail.

Crisfield, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Authorities today rearrested James Jones, Negro, and his 26-year-old son, James, in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Margaret Brumbley, 58, on New Year's Eve. Her body was found stabbed and beaten at her Marion Station home, 10 miles from here.

Two bloody fingerprints were found and the rearrest of the two Negroes followed calling of Sergt. Walter Martin, Baltimore police finger print expert, into the case.

The Negroes, who occupied the farm next to the Brumbley's, were being questioned late today by Martin and Sheriff Luther Daugherty, of Somerset County. The father, authorities said, was seen near the Brumbley home Sunday.

The woman's body was found in the bedroom of the farmhouse early yesterday by her husband, Fred Brumbley, who told police that he did not return home until after midnight New Year's Eve.

London, Jan. 2 (AP).—Arthur E. P. Brome Weigall, 53, a leading authority on the antiquities of Egypt, died here today after a long illness. He was the author of biographies of Cleopatra, Nero, Marc Antony, Sappho of Lesbos and Alexandria the Great.

U. S. Officials Get $50 Cigars From Ship Line

Gifts Are Returned to Same Firm Once Accused of Padding Bills.

The Black Diamond Steamship Corporation, accused last fall in a Senate inquiry of covering up $50 loans to Steve O'Connor, son of President Hoover's Shipping Board chairman, by padding Government bills, was revealed yesterday as donor of quantities of $50 boxes of cigars to present Shipping Board heads, including Ewing Y. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

Mitchell promptly sent back his $50 box, and in a general order directed all officials and employes of the six department divisions under him to do likewise. He said one official of the United States Shipping Board Bureau had received seven boxes from the Black Diamond line, which tendered a "wagon load" of the 50-cent cigars along with its season's greetings.

The Assistant Secretary of Commerce also disclosed that an agent of the line, H. B. Arledge, characterized as a well-known lobbyist, had sent an inexpensive compact to Miss Berta Lee Nolen, Mitchell's secretary, and that this gift was returned.

Influence "Obvious."

Pointing out it is a creminal offense for any Government worker to accept anything designed to influence his decision on any question, Mitchell said the Black Diamond Line's gifts obviously were made to "influence favorable action by those who receive them."

At a late hour no report had been received from the steamship company as to how rapidly its "wagon load" of Christmas cigars was being returned, but Arledge had spoken fervently on the subject of his gift to Miss Nolen, accusing Mitchell of "going a long way out of his way to find trouble."

The Assistant Secretary of Commerce declared, however, that he regarded the matter extremely important.

Benjamin A. Hartnett, former operating manager for the Black Diamond Co., testified before the committee he was discharged because he refused to approve an "extra labor" item for O'Connor's son, Steve.

It was at this hearing that Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, committee chairman, charged the president of another steamship company ordered payment of a $510 tailor's bill for the elder O'Connor.

Mitchell Writes Note.

Mitchell, whose memorandum to all departments under him, directing rturn of all gratuties, was made public Saturday, wrote to the steamship line December 26, as follows:

"I received from you today a box of La Corona cigars. I do not think it good practice for a Government official to accept gifts, even of small value, from those with whom he has, or may have, business relations. Therefore I have returned the box of cigars to you."

The assistant secretary commented that since he knew no one in the Black Diamond Line, it was obvious that the $50 present was an attempt to influence him.

The compact sent Miss Nolen by Arledge was returned two days later with a similar letter from Mitchell. Arledge said it cost only $1.50.

Pastor's Trial As Murderer Opens Today

Arkansas Cleric Accused in Janitor's Death After Feud.

Piggott, Ark., Jan. 2 (AP).—The Rev. Dale S. Crowley, 46-year-old Baptist minister once expelled from college in Texas for accusing faculty members of teaching evolution, faces trial on a charge of murder here tomorrow as an outgrowth of a church feud at Jonesboro.

He will plead self defense in the slaying of J. W. MacMurdo, aged janitor of the Jonesboro Baptist Tabernacle, of which Crowley was pastor.

The case was transferred here on a change of venue from Craighead County, where the minister said he could not obtain a fair trial because of feeling aroused by the church controversy. Crowley has been free under $10,000 bond.

MacMurdo was shot to death in the Jonesboro Tabernacle soon after Crowley returned with a court order recognizing him as pastor. MacMurdo had been janitor for a rival faction, headed by the Rev. Joe Jeffers.

The attempt of Jeffers to oust Crowley as pastor resulted in hostilities and finally the slaying.

Crowley said he shot MacMurdo after the janitor fired at him.

Crowley was expelled from Baylor University at Waco, after a controversy resulting from accusations that evolution was taught by some faculty members.

New York Has Air Lines to 46 States

Planes Involved Cover 150,000 Miles Daily.

New York (U.P.).—New York now has direct airplane service to 46 States, the only two commonwealths not having daily air mail-passenger plane service being Rhode Island and Delaware, each of which, however, is served indirectly through proximity to airports in other States. There is direct airplane service from this city to 178 cities in the 48 States, and over this network the planes of all companies fly approximately 150,000 miles a day.

Lehman Spurs New York Quiz Of Liquor Graft

Only Petty "Shakedowns" Revealed, Says Head of Rum Board.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Spurred on by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, the State alcohol beverage control board hastened its investigation today into the first charges of graft since liquor was legalized.

Expressing gratification that the board "has acted promptly and vigorously," Gov. Lehman gave this order to Edward P. Mulrooney, its chairman:

"If there is any corruption or graft in the administration of the liquor-control law anywhere in this State it must be stamped out without delay and as fully as is humanly possible."

Two members of the board at once opened the hearing on the graft charges—Mrs. John R. Shepard, an associate of Mrs. Charles H. Sabin in directing the work of the women's organization for National prohibition reform, and John Sullivan.

Mulrooney said the graft was petty in nature and consisted, as far as the investigation has shown, in payment of gratuties by restaurant proprietors to employes of the board for the delivery of their licenses—whereas the licenses should have been mailed.

Five temporary inspectors have been dismissed. A Negro filing clerk, Eric St. John, has been suspended.

Under the orders of Gov. Lehman any evidence of criminal acts will be turned over to the grand jury.

Witnesses were examined privately and under oath. They included owners and employes of the restaurants receiving licenses.

As disclosed by Mulrooney, the graft worked in this way:

The regulations provided licenses should be mailed with a registered return receipt showing delivery. Instead, in about 50 instances, restaurateurs received only the board's regulations and sent back the receipt, thus making records conform. The licenses were delivered in person and the deliverers were given a gratuity.

Suits Follow Insurance Loss

Officers of German Firm Face Action on American Investment.

Berlin, Jan. 2 (AP).—Stockholders of the Iduna Insurance Co. today agreed to request criminal proceedings and enter civil suits against officers responsible for what was described as the virtual loss of at least $4,000,000 invested with the company by Americans.

The action came after Charles Denby, Philadelphia lowyer, and a son-in-law of Sen. David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, appealed to the stockholders for fairness to American investors and for recovery of at least part of $4,000,000 invested with Iduna Life and Iduna General Cos. by American insurance brokers.

"Everything seemed to be in order," Denby said, "when certain officers of the insurance companies appropriated to the virtually all assets of the holding company. Unfortunately, this case has created a painful impression in America."

"Americans complied with conditions imposed by the Reich insurance office, though some seemed rather harsh," he added. "Among these was the insistence that capital of the companies be almost fully paid in, a condition unique among German insurance companies, where average payment on nominal capital did not greatly exceed 25 per cent."

Bullsnake Pals With Rattlers.

Cascade, Mont. (U.P.).—Hereditary enemies sometimes patch their differences and get along together amiably. A big bullsnake was found hibernating with five rattlesnakes near here recently. The bullsnake is supposed to be a deadly enemy of the rattler.

Senate Reopens Detroit Bank Inquiry Today

Pecora Promises More on Trading Pool Operations.

Further revelations about trading pool operations of the Guardian group of Michigan banks, which may result in reform of banking laws, are promised for today's resumed hearing before the Senate Banking Committee.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, has been studying material collected by his investigators in Detroit during the ten-day recess, and will recall to the stand various Guardian officials to explain details of this group banking system.

t was the collapse of the Guardian Bank of Commerce and the First National Bank of Detroit, one of the Detroit bankers' group, which led to the National bank holiday the day after President Roosevelt was inaugurated last spring.

nvestigation into the Guardian group began before Christmas, when it was revealed the group "window-dressed" member banks' stockholders' reports so that they showed no bills payable.

SisS7pecora will continue his inquiry into this practice, in addition to opening his investigation of the group's stock pool operations.

It is generally felt the subcommittee's report will include recommendations for stricter Federal supervision of stock exchange operations, particularly of trading pools. Investigation into the Chase National Bank last month revealed extensive pools for manipulation of stocks.

All questionnaires sent to members of the New York Stock Exchange have been returned. Pecora's staff of experts is at work analyzing them. Their digest will be studied by committee members and then introduced into the record. It is thought unlikely that any stock exchange members will be called to testify.

The Guardian investigation will probably last at least a week after which the Detroit Bankers Group will be called.

Airplane Camera Is Fitted on Wings

Automatic Device Will Take Pole Pictures.

New York (U.P.).—What is expected to be the most perfect map record made of either pole will result from the development of a new type of aerial camera, which will take pictures automatically from the airplane wing at intervals of 6 seconds. These views will be assembled later into one continuous film.

This new type camera recently was demonstrated to United Air Lines experts prior to being delivered to the Ellsworth Antarctic expedition, now at its base in New Zealand. The new movie camera completely outfitted weighs less than 20 pounds. The flight will be made during the period of Antarctic midnight sun, and pictures can be taken all along the course.

CWA Requires More Space, Takes Over Forum Quarters

Various Organizations Are Crowded Out of Board Room.

The Federation of Citizens Associations and numerous veterans' organizations and civic bodies will have to find other quarters for their meetings because of the expansion of CWA activities in the District.

Commissioner George E. Allen revealed yesterday that Capt. Howard F. Clark, chairman of the District CWA committee, has been authorized to remove seats on both sides of the District board room to make way for CWA office personnel.

This will leave only the center section of chairs, providing about 50 seats, a third of the room's original capacity.

The board room is used almost nightly by some organization or another, and the Federation of Citizens Associations has met there for years, even while denouncing the Commissioners most violently.

Capt. Clark announced that a safety engineer has been selected in accordance with the request of Harry L. Hopkins, CWA administrator, and that he would work under the direction of Lieut. Robert E. York, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

Maj. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, informed Capt. Clark that he could use 25 Civil Works Service nurses and orderlies at a new tuberculosis ward just opened at the municipal hospital.

Broad Powers Are Requested By LaGuardia

New Mayor Seeks Right to Revise City's Finances.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, swiftly grasping the reins of the city's government, asked the board of estimate today for unprecedented powers to slash municipal expenditures.

Shortly after 9 a. m. he plunged into the task of solving the city's complicated finances.

The new mayor called the board of estimate into session. His administration controls it, the first non-Tammany board in almost two decades. In terse, unequivocal terms told the board what he wanted.

Asks Full Power.

"This is a most drastic bill, gentlemen," said LaGuardia, "it gives the mayor unlimited power."

The bill was laid over until tomorrow. It is expected to be passed then. It will then be sent to the State Legislature for approval.

In the midst of his appeal LaGuardia encountered his first heckling — his predecessor, John P. O'Brien had contended with it almost daily.

LaGuardia and the board were discussing a $5,000,000 appropriation for the jobless when the interruption came. A woman, standing in the rear of the chamber, shouted:

"You're just a tool of Wall street. You don't care what you do about starving men and women. Why don't you help the unemployed?"

O'Brien had ignored that kind of heckling at board meetings, but not LaGuardia. He jumped to his feet, his eyes flashed, his voice snapped:

Mayor Orders Action.

"That's not so. You're just making a noise. We're doing something."

She interrupted again. LaGuardia, turning to W. H. Whitney, local CWA administrator, shouted the woman down with:

"Give that lady a job. See if she'll take it. Give every one with her a job."

LaGuardia's first concern was his bill, under which the new mayor would be granted authority to abolish city agencies he considers unnecessary, consolidate departments, transfer functions from one department to another and recreate salary schedules at lower rates.

The resolution made an important pledge to the taxpayers—to put aside a substantial portion of its revenues from real property taxes as a reserve against delinquent taxes.

LaGuardia announced he intended to discharge Sidney S. Levine, commissioner of the Department of Licenses.

Mineral Output Lags in Canada

Production Loss Blamed on Building Slump; Thousands Idle.

Montreal (U.P.).—Nonmetallic products, such as asbestos, feldspar, mica and building materials, were responsible for a heavy drop in the mineral production of the Province of Quebec during 1932, according to the annual report of the Quebec Bureau of Mines, just issued.

The bureau points to the world depression, notably the building slump, as the cause for the drop.

Total production for 1932 was only $24,557,066, as compared with $35,778,364 in 1931, and a decline of 47 per cent when compared with 1929. The total for 1932 was the lowest since 1925.

The most regrettable feature of the drop, notes the report, was the consequent serious unemployment situation which developed. In the asbestos fields, where in normal years 2,500 men found work, only 1,000 were employed last year. Employment among metal miners in northwestern Quebec, however, increased.

Gold mining, the report states, had the most prosperous year in its history in this province last year. In 1932 the gold production was 401,105 ounces, valued at $8,291,576 in gold funds. This is an increase of 34 per cent over 1931, and of 568 per cent compared with five years ago.

Silver production totaled 628,902 ounces, compared with 530,345 ounces in 1931.

Byrd to Hold Court Session in Antarctic

Buffalo, N. Y. (U.P.).—A special term of the Buffalo Supreme Court was ordered established "somewhere in Little America" recently, with Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd appointed as "assistant supreme court justice."

The situation came about when Justice Harris signed an order commissioning Admiral Byrd to take testimony from Edgar Cox, a member of his crew, for submission to a court action here. The order will be mailed to New Zealand and picked up there by one of the Byrd expedition boats.

First Buggy Sale in 10 Years Caused Sensation

Wilmington, Ohio (U.P.).—The first buggy sold in this community for ten years has just caused a near sensation here.

When the vehicle was placed in a store window before its delivery, citizens crowded about with the awe of seeing a first airplane.

The model came complete with rubber tires, nonsplatter dashboard and all other "new" equipment. George Douglas, farmer, paid $155 for the vehicle, $17 less than asked in preautomobile days.

King's English—Scrambled

Ten Who Made Country Chuckle at Their "Wise Cracks" Also Made Brethren Out of "Yokels" and City "Smoothies."

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Wilfred J. Funk, the dictionary publisher and poet, says ten modern Americans largely are responsible for the jargon of Americana.

It's that lingo, now popularized and accepted, that made brethren of the "yokels" and "city slickers," and "panicked" Main street and "wowed" the "main stem" of Manhattan—"t-t-t-t!"

The principal contributors, in Funk's opinion, are Sime Silverman, H. L. Mencken, T. A. Dorgan, Walter Winchell, Bugs Baer, Ring Lardner, Damon Runyon, Gelett Burgess, George Ade and Gene Buck.

Silverman—he died recently—transposed nouns and verbs with reckless abandon. As editor of Variety, a theatrical magazine, he took the exclamation "wow" and made a Silverman verb of it. "Panicked" also is his contribution.

Sets Town to Chuckling.

But perhaps his most famous use of the English language appeared in headlines on "Black Thursday," when the stock market took the depression's "rap."

"Wall street lays an egg!" Variety screamed. And the town chuckled.

Mencken's contributions are numerous. His "American Language" is full of them. "Yahwah" is one of the most recent ones and the "Bible Belt" is one of the most famous. "Some say he coined "Yokels."

Tad Dorgan—he made a little fuzzy dog a national institution—is dead, too, but his work lives. Always in the right lower corner of his famous cartoons he drew a pup that barked wisecracks. Remember "Balogna?"

Winchell—he's been "ankling" along Broadway for a good while now—has treated the King's English to a Winchellistic evolution which produced "blessed event" and "phffft" and many others.

Gems From Bugs Baer.

A man with big ears once drew a jibe like this: "He looks like a car with its doors open," and Bugs Baer has created another simile. His one about the fellow whose ears looked like "handles on a loving cup" also scored. Similes roll from his "mill" (Americana for typewriter) like promises from a politician.

Lardner has also gone away, but before he left he made you know Al.

Runyon is famous for his words about the "dips" and "mobsters" of the downunder world. To him a gun is the "heat" and an academic course in rock breaking is the "stir."

"The Rubaiyat of Omar Cayenne" said Burgess once. So "the Goops" came along from his pen. "Aw, don't be a goop"—remember? He wrote the goop dictionary and the goop enclyclopaedia.

Ade Wrote Winners.

Ade is an authority on slang. He wrote "Fables in Slang," and his original expressions are many. "Back home and broke" is almost a National motto now and Ade wrote it.

Buck—no, he didn't bring 'em back alive, it's another Buck—is responsible for many of the songs that made the follies famous. "It's Tulip Time * * * Two Lips I Know" is one of them.

Many words born in another generation are just now becoming known, generally. Some folks say Shakespeare coined "racketeer," and "softy" was a perfectly good word in the early 80's.

If you don't believe it—you don't know your "Tom Sawyer."

Huge Vote Tall Urged to Bare Chicago Fraud

Leaders Ask Check of All 1932 Ballots Against "Army of Crooks."

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP).—From their tomb in the public files, 1,664,000 ballots cast in the 1932 general election may be exhumed in a hunt for evidence that Cook County's ballot boxes were tainted with fraud and corruption.

A group of eminent civic and political leaders petitioned the county court today for a recount of the entire November election.

They charged that 29 per cent of the ballot boxes in 400 precincts analyzed had been stuffed with miscounted and fraudulently marked ballots.

Judge Emund K. Jarecki impounded the ballots and indicated he probably would grant the petition.

Contest Revealed Fraud.

The signatories promised to defray the costs of the tremendous recount, which may run up to $50,000.

In support of the charges of illegal voting, the petition cited the recent unseating of Erwin J. Hasten, Democrat, from the municipal court bench after a new tally had been demanded by Samuel Heller, Republican, since elevated to Hasten's place. The investigation in that election contest resulted in jail sentences for a number of polls officers.

"This State has been at great pains," the petition read, "to enact laws to ascertain correctly the will of the people.

Votes "Nullified."

"Millions of dollars have been expended to accomplish that end. Ingenious devices have been set up to protect the voter in casting his ballot secretly, in having it correctly counted, and in giving it the voter's intended effect. But these laws, these vast expenditures of the taxpayers' money and these ingenious devices have repeatedly been nullified by an army of election crooks."

Among the signers was Frank J. Loesch, noted octogenarian head of the Chicago Crime Commission, and John D. Black, president of the Chicago Bar Association.

Death Recalls Worst Shipwreck at Vineyard

Gay Head, Mass. (U.P.).—The death recently of Moses P. Cooper, 68, recalled the worst shipwreck in the history of Martha's Vineyard Island—the sinking of the City of Columbus off here January 1, 1884, approximately 50 years ago.

Cooper, a fisherman, was one of an emergency crew that launched the first lifeboat and safely landed seven passengers. Later 13 other survivors were brought ashore. A total of 99 persons perished in the wreck.

Chicago Liquor Rule Arouses Political Fight

Mayor Demands Control by City; Gov. Horner Wants State Curb.

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP).—Whether Chicago's adult male population should continue drinking in 8,000 liquor taverns, about 3,000 of them as yet unlicensed, tonight had started a bitter political fight.

The schism had spread to the Democratic party, with Mayor Edward J. Kelly insiting on "home rule" and saloons for men only, and Gov. Henry Horner demanding rigid control under a State comission. Both are Democrats.

The State legislature reconvenes tomorrow after being deadlocked on liquor laws several weeks, and today State senators from Cook County were summoned for conferences with Kelly.

City officials, meanwhile, began vigorous attempts to enforce a city control law which Gov. Horner said is unconstitutional.

The ordinances provide for 1 a. m. closing of bar rooms and a $250 license fee for each six months of operation. Mayor Kelly since has announced steps would be taken to keep bars free of females, saying "women should be held on a higher plane."

His opponents held bars should be decent enough for women or be closed.

About 300 tavern owners today paid their $250 fees, asking the money be returned if the control plan were overthrown.

Replying to charges that the city administration was seeking to use the return of legal liquor for political purposes, Mayor Kelly today declared the new tavern is entirely different from the old saloon.

"We have ordered all obstructions removed from windows and have eliminated back rooms," he said. "Men won't get drunk in a tavern if people walking by can see them.

"The poor man has as much right to congregate as have the rich people in their clubs. When the people decide to do away with bars, they will vote that way at a referendum."

Dr. Wu, China's Beloved Envoy, Dies in Orient

Diplomat Who "Adopted" America Served Here Until 1931.

Hongkong, Jan. 2 (AP).—Dr. C. C. Wu, one of the most beloved diplomts ever assigned to Washington, died today in his forty-seventh year of cerebral embolism.

He had served China abroad and at home throughout the existence of the Chinese republic, despite its various changes of political complexion, until a year ago, when he retired from active life.

In Washington and in Geneva, where he was the Chinese representative to the League of Nations, he was regarded as practically an American by adoption. He even spoke English as an American for he spent most of his boyhood in the United States.

One of his proud recollections was that he had been valedictorian of his graduating class from the Atlantic City High School in 1904.

Father Also a Diplomat.

He was born June 16, 1887, in Tientsin and his father, the late Dr. Wu Ting-fang, then royal minister to the United States, brought the future diplomat to live in the country where he himself represented his emperor.

Dr. C. C. Wu was Minister to Washington for two years, returning to China in 1931. Since that time he had refused several southern China posts—including the governorship of Hainan Island, a possession which separates the Gulf of Tongking from the China Sea.

Wu went to Washington in March, 1929, but resigned in June, owing to his lack of sympathy for the Nanking government of Chiang-Kai-Shek.

Sought Place in China.

Later Dr. Wu returned to China to take a leading part in efforts to iron out differences between Nanking and opposition governments and became chairman of the Kwangtung provincial administration in December, 1931.

Dr. Wu was graduated in law from London University and was admitted to the bar in Lincoln's Inn. From 1915, when he was named counselor of the Chinese foreign office, he took a leading part in constitutional reforms and treaty negotiations.

Dr. Wu headed the South China delegation to the Versailles Peace Conference in 1918 and 1919. He held a number of important government offices before coming to Washington.

U. S. Citizens In China Moved

Sent to Quiet Areas While Nanking Forces Fight Against Reds.

All Americans residing near Amoy and Foochow, China, are being moved in the foreign settlements at these two points to avoid peril arising from Chinese military operations in those sectors, the State Department was advised yesterday.

The Chinese Nationalist government at Nanking has asked all foreign diplomats to have their nationals moved to these areas, the department was informed. The Nanking government is fighting so-called Communist forces in those sectors.

Nelson T. Johnson, American Minister to China, cabled the department that the American Consul at Amoy, Lynn W. Franklin, had advised him that all Americans at Changchow and Siokhe had gone to Amoy where the local situation was quiet but tense.

The vice consul at Foochow, Gordon L. Burke, told Johnson all Americans from Yenping and Kienningfu had withdrawn to Foochow.

Boston Huge Laboratory For Auto Safety Tests

Boston (U.P.).—This city has been turned into an enormous laboratory for a scientific test which may produce a real remedy for automobile accidents.

Nearly 1,000 field workers, operating under the direction of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology highway safety survey, are waching known traffic danger spots as a means of establishing and classifying the principal causes of highway fatalities.

This is but one feature of a comprehensive program, the results of which are expected not only to revolutionize Massachusetts' highway safety policy, but those of other States.

Pennsylvania Retains Its Hunting Record

Harrisburg, Pa. (U.P.).—Pennsylvania this year retained its place in the country's sporting firmament as the most fertile State of all for hunting, according to Ernest E. Harwood, executive secretary of the State game commission.

He reported an unusually large bag of ringneck pheasants and squirrels. Many wild turkeys also were killed, although the rabbit totals were smaller than usual. Early snow in the mountains, providing excellent tracking, led to the killing of many bears, some of then exceptional specimens, he said.

President Goes Before First Session Today

Plans to Face Congress With War Threat Over Capitol.

tle men who formerly were protected by the antitrust laws."

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader, in announcing the steering committee's discussion, said the general feeling in that group was that giving the President power to negotiate reciprocal tariffs would "not be a surrender of any of the rights of the Senate." He said there were numerous precedents for the delegation of such authority and cited the flexible clause of the tariff act as one. The Democrats, however, strenuously opposed the flexible clause when the Hawley-Smoot bill was under debate.

G. O. P. Plans.

The House Republican steering committee met with the Republican members of the Rules Committee to discuss what course they should follow during the session. Bertrand H. Snell, House Republican leader, said no program has been adopted pending the submission of the President's message.

"We are just as interested in trying to help the country as the majority party," Mr. Snell asserted. "But the time has not yet come when there should be only one party in this country. There is constructive work the minority party can do and this we intend to do in a reasonable and dignified manner. When the majority is wrong, we shall put our proposition before the country."

House Democratic leaders did not meet, but announced that later in the week, probably tomorrow, a party caucus would be called to bind their followers for a change in the rules so as to prevent less than a full majority forcing any legislation to a vote.

Few Here to Seek Aid.

In general, yesterday was a quiet day before the session on Capitol Hill. Moreover the city was free of large organized groups here to petition Congress for relief. During the depression it has been usual for groups such as veterans and farmers to gather here to impress Congress with their plight.

The meeting of Congress today marks the beginning of a new era on Capitol Hill. Previously the regular sessions of Congress convened on the first Monday in December. The Norris "lame duck" amendment fixed January 3, unless otherwise specified by law, for the opening of Congressional sessions. Only once before has Congress convened in January, the occasion being the second session of the First Congress, on January 4, 1790.

Ordinarily the opening day of the first session of a new Congress is devoted to swearing in new members. This task, however, was completed last spring, except for eight members of the House and four Senators elected last fall. In the House, Mrs. Bolivar Kemp, who has a certificate of election from the Sixth Louisiana District, will be asked to step aside until the validity of her election can be investigated by the House Elections Committee.

Other Routine.

As soon as the swearing in of new members is completed, the House and Senate will adopt a series of resolutions notifying each other it is in session, providing for a meeting hour, a continuation of the rules and the appointment of a joint committee to notify the President Congress is ready for business.

If President Roosevelt decides to deliver his message in person he will return to Capitol Hill with the committee. Otherwise he will send separate copies of his address to House and Senate, where in each chamber it will be read by one of the clerks. In the event the President goes to the Capitol, the Senate will be assembled with the House in the latter's chamber. The President would start speaking about 1:15 p. m.

The message, completed last night after President Roosevelt worked on it exclusively throughout the day, was said not to be more than 2,000 words long and would deal in a general way with his legislative proposals. He will elaborate each major proposal in subsequent messages. The budget message will be sent to Congress tomorrow.

After the President's message is received, Senate and House are expected to adjourn for the day, although the latter may be detained for an hour or two in debate over the election contest against Mrs. Kemp.

House leaders expect to get down to work tomorrow if the bill increasing the Federal tax on distilled liquor to $2 a gallon is ready. This measure will be rushed through the House as rapidly as possible and will be followed by the liquor control bill for the District of Columbia.

The unfinished business before the Senate is the bill authorizing the President to name a resident of the mainland as Governor of Hawaii. Senator Robinson, however, announced this measure would be abandoned and that the Senate would not give any bill the preferential "unfinished business" status until the liquor tax legislation is ready to be taken up in that body. It must first be passed by the House, since it is a revenue measure.

For today the President's message will be the highlight. The last President to address an opening session of Congress was Calvin Coolidge, in December, 1923. Four years later Mr. Coolidge addressed a joint meeting of Congress on the Washington Bicentennial program. Herbert Hoover did not appear at any time before both bodies of Congress. He addressed the Senate once on balancing the budget.

The personal delivery of Presidential messages to Congress has seldom taken place. It was started by George Washington, but was abandoned by Thomas Jefferson and not resumed until 100 years later, by Woodrow Wilson. Warren G. Harding continued the idea, but Mr. Coolidge made only one appearance at the opening of Congress.

Woman Is Sought For Dual Murder

Estranged Wife Leaves Suicide Note.

Massillon, Ohio, Jan. 2 (AP).—A careful search of woods and streams for Mrs. Edith D. Christman, 51, who left an incoherent note indicating that she might kill herself, had failed tonight to yield any trace of the suspected slayer of two members of her family or her body.

Mrs. Christman is sought for the double shooting of her estranged husband, Roy Christman, 49, and his invalid sister, Iva, 38, on their farm home near here New Year's Day. The coroner recommended that a murder warrant be issued for her arrest.

Attention and affection lavished upon the sister-ni-law by her husband and members of his family is believed to have angered the woman.

Portugal Hopes U. S. Will Favor Port Wine

Little Portugal has hopes of winning a favored place with America's wine drinkers, according to the Associated Press.

Reports to the Department of Commerce say vintners are looking forward to a growing demand in the United States for port wine, which is Portugal's most important article of export. Stocks available for export are estimated at 122,000,000 bottles. England and France have been the chief foreign outlets for Portugal's port.

Roby Selected Deputy Clerk In Montgomery

Ben G. Davis Gets Board Seat, Succeeding Miss Engle.

Odorion W. Roby, former supervisor of county aid, was yesterday appointed deputy clerk to the Montgomery County Commission, which also seated Commissioner Ben G. Davis, to succeed Miss Lavinia Engle, resigned.

Mrs. Walter E. Perry, of Bethesda, leader in social work and prominent woman Democrat, succeeded Roby as supervisor of county aid. Sheriff Richard H. Lansdale, of Sandy Spring, will be sworn in as county commissioner today.

Succeeds Williams.

He succeeds Downey M. Williams, recently appointed to the Liquor Control Board. H. Eddington Bell, of Potomac, also will be inducted today into the office of sheriff, to succeed Lansdale.

Mrs. Perry is a graduate of the Carolina Teachers College and also studied at the University of Chicago and New York University. She served on the staff of the New Haven Community Chest, and made a study of social work for the Rockefeller Foundation.

Member of Welfare Board.

In 1931 she was appointed executive director of the Social Service League of Montgomery County. She is a member of the county welfare board, is president of the League of Women Voters, a member of the United Democratic Clubs of Montgomery County and of the board of directors of the county chapter of the Red Cross.

Mr. Roby served as county commissioner from 1914 to 1921, and for 11 years was a maintenance inspector for the State roads commission. He has been a member of the House of Delegates for five years. Since 1932 he has been supervisor of county aid.

Reich Sterilization Courts Established

18 Jurisdictions Will Hear Cases.

Berlin, Jan. 2 (AP).—Thuringian state authorities moved rapidly today and established 18 courts to handle exclusively the cases of persons suffering incurable ailments who will be subject to sterilization operations under a decree made effective today.

Similarly, a state sterilization supreme court was named to hear appeals of these cases.

For the most part, however, many of the newly inaugurated sterilization tribunals did not begin functioning today as scheduled because details of organization were not complete. It was estimated that 400,000 hereditary defectives may come under the jurisdiction of the courts.

President Due To Return Part Of U. S. Pay Cut

Completion of Living Cost Report May Bring Action Today.

to ask Congress to restore the 15 per cent Federal pay cut was recommended last night to the Columbia Heights Citizens Association by Representative Virginia Penckes (Democrat), of Indiana.

The woman representative, who is a member of the House District Committee, also urged all civic and commercial organizations of the city to form a single group "and approach Congress with the story of what should be done to make our Nation's Capital a model for all the world."

Speaking at the association's meeting at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Jenckes also recommended that Congress be asked to restore the reduction of leave of absence of the Police and Fire Department's members. She also said a move should be started to secure more funds for the District's schools.

Seeks Backing for Road.

She especially urged citizens to support the movement for completion of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, which would circle the city and extend on each side of the Potomac to Great Falls, where a bridge would be built.

Construction of the parkway, Mrs. Jenckes said, would increase property values and, through increased District revenues, would make for lowering of the tax rate.

"I hope to see some concerted action on this most necessary civic endeavor," she told the gathering.

Mrs. Jenckes also urged the consolidation of residents to ask Congress for representation.

"If your plan is properly prepared," she said, "no doubt the Seventy-third Congress would want the honor of emancipating the citizens of the District of Columbia."

Pupils Aid Future Teachers in Education

Harrisburg, Pa. (U.P.).—Future teachers for public schools in Pennsylvania receive the cooperation of about 20,000 boys and girls in elementary schools while they are studying and teaching.

Under the direction of Dr. James N. Rule, State superintendent of public instruction, the children attend schools on the campuses of State teachers colleges, where the students and their student teachers are under the supervision of instructors in the colleges.

Shrimp Bait Catches Duck for Texas Man

Texas City, Tex. (U.P.).—Louis Shannon went fishing and caught a duck.

Baiting his hook with a fat shrimp, Louis cast it into water near where a small flock of ducks were feeding. One curious and hungry duck saw the choice shrimp submerge and dived for a meal.

Louis pulled the duck out, removed the hook from its throat, tied a string around the duck's neck and led it home.

Court Rules Repeal Ended Prosecutions

Detroit, Jan. 2 (AP).—Ruling that the repeal of the eighteenth amendment terminated the power of Federal courts to convict or punish violators of the Volstead act, Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle today dismissed prohibition law violation charges against Henry Borke, of Ossineke, Mich.

In the light of this ruling United States attorneys tonight studied the records of approximately 170 other cases still pending in the eastern Michigan District.

Fordney, Settle Consider New Hop Into Ether

Hope to Climb 15 Miles in Stratosphere for Weather Data.

(Associated Press.)

A new balloon flight into the upper reaches of the atmosphere, possibly to the unprecedented height of 15 miles, is being considered by Maj. Chester L. Fordney, of the Marine Corps, and Lieut. Comdr. T. G. W. Settle, of the Navy.

The two recently established an official world's record, reaching 61,237 feet in a balloon which landed finally in a New Jersey marsh. A higher record has been claimed by Soviet fliers, but their instrument readings were not submitted to the International Aeronautic Federation, and the Settle-Fordney altitude stands as the official peak attained by man.

Maj. Fordney already has been asked by prospective sponsors of a new stratosphere flight to outline his views on the value of attempting to reach still higher altitudes with a larger balloon.

In their first flight, Settle and Fordney had a balloon of 600,000 cubic feet capacity. They believe 15 miles could be reached with a bag of 1,500,000 cubic feet.

The Marine officer now is discussing the possibility of a new stratosphere venture with Dr. Arthur H. Compton, of the University of Chicago, scientific director of the last flight.

Before leaving for Chicago, Fordney said one of the most important aims would be penetration of the so-called ozone layer.

This layer, once computed to be 35 miles above the earth, has been placed somewhat lower by more recent calculations. Fordney believes a 15-mile flight might pierce it and provide observations of vast benefit in future weather forecasting.

Explaining the matter from a scientific viewpoint, Fordney said:

"There is a corelation between the ultra-violet end of the sun's spectrum and barometric pressure, which is now used almost entirely in forecasting weather. If we can learn more about the ozone layer and its effect in filtering these rays, we may have valuable information to assist in future weather forecasting."

Plan Held Possible.

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 2 (AP).—Informed of Washington reports that Maj. Chester L. Fordney and Lieut. Comdr. T. G. W. Settle plan another stratosphere flight in a 1,500,000-cubic foot bag expected to reach a height of 15 miles, local balloon experts today declared such a balloon could be built and flown. They added, however, that it would require extensive calculating before it could be established that a bag of such size would carry as high as 15 miles.

The experts, builders o fthe balloon in which Settle and Fordney set a world's record in a flight from here last year, pointed out that the weight of the rigging and of the balloon itself increases tremendously in the rare atmosphere.

Settle could not be immediately reached today, but his wife expressed doubt that he would be interested in a stratosphere venture this year. The Settles leave for Lakehurst next week and in May depart for China, where Settle has been assigned by the Navy.

Hoover Presented Copy Of Old Lincoln Letter

San Jose, Calif., (U.P.).—Former President Hoover has been presented with a photostatic copy of a letter written by Abraham Lincoln to Jessie W. Fell, at Springfield, Ohio, December 21, 1859. A delegation of Santa Clara County judges and attorneys made the presentation.

The original letter, valued at $50,000, was found among the effects of Fell's daughter, Nancy L. Fell, upon her death at Los Gatos, Calif., several months ago,

Gold Chalice Paid Debts to Church

Houston, Tex. (U.P.).—Debts which the late Mgr. George T. Walsh owed his church here for money loaned to people in need were paid with a beautiful gold chalice, valued at between $3,500 and $5,000.

His will gave instructions for the cup, with which he celebrated the Lord's Supper, to be sold. After the debts were paid the remainder of the money thus derived was given to a Galveston, Tex., bishop for distribution to the poor.

Maj. Muncaster Will Be Given Military Rites

West Point Graduate to Be Buried Today in Arlington.

Funeral services for Maj. John H. Muncaster, U. S. A., retired, will be held with full military honors at Arlington Cemetery at 11 o'clock this morning. He died Monday at Walter Reed Hospital. He is survived by his widow, who lives at 3220 Connecticut avenue.

Lieut. Cols. Carl C. Oakes, Charles T. Nulsen, Harry B. Crea, and John T. Kennedy; Majs. Glenn P. Wilhelm and Herbert J. Lawes, and Thomas Hamlin will act as honorary pallbearers.

Maj. Muncaster was graduated from the Military Academy in 1904. He served in the Philippines, at Vera Cruz and in the World War he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross with the following citation:

"After the loss of all his company commanders, Maj. Muncaster advanced at the head of his battalion, leading the men from a very disadvantageous position to the capture of a nearby hill held by the enemy. In the counterattack which followed he not only commended the men of his battalion personally but assisted in the defense of the position."

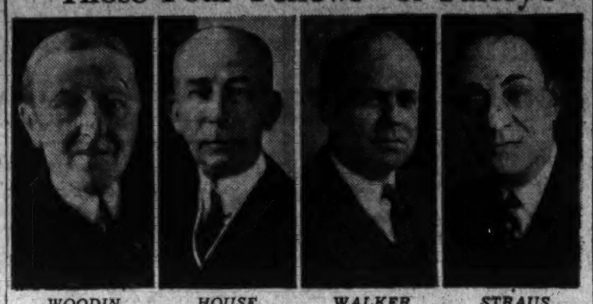
"Those Four Fellows" of Farley's



WOODIN HOUSE WALKER STRAUS

Contributions of $10,000 each by William H. Woodin, Col. E. M. House, Frank C. Walker and Jessie Isidor Straus comprised the original Roosevelt-for-President war chest in 1930. "Those four fellows" as Postmaster General Farley calls them, enabled him to organize two years in advance of the Democratic convention.

Woodin, First Cabinet Casualty, Just "One of Those 4 Fellows"

Helped Start Roosevelt War Chest, But Evil Luck Befell Him.

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

Large in the political background of William H. Woodin, who entered private life yesterday after ten troubled months as Secretary of Treasury, is a $10,000 check dated 1930 and payable to James A. Farley, new Postmaster General.

"He was one of those four fellows," Farley is likely to reply to persons inquiring about Woodin, Jesse Isidor Straus, Col. E. M. House or Frank C. Walker.

"They gave $10,000," Farley once told the United Press. "There was Straus, Col. House and Will Woodin. Walker was the other one."

Straus became Ambassador to France. Woodin took the Treasury after Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, refused it. House desired no political recognition. Neither did Walker, but President Roosevelt prevailed upon him last July to become Secretary of the Executive Council, or super-Cabinet, organized then. More recently Walker was named head of the powerful National Emergency Council, whose organization, coordinating various relief and emergency activities, will reach into every community.

Originated War Chest.

The four $10,000 checks of 1930 comprised the Roosevelt-for-President war chest when more experienced campaigners were referring to Farley as an amateur politician. Those large contributions enabled Farley to organize, travel and talk.

He turned up at Chicago in 1932 with a Phalanx of delegates, first confusing and then defeating the enemy. The Capital does not wonder that Woodin held on so long, nor that Mr. Roosevelt was reluctant to supplant him despite a rising clamor for his political head. Illness finally forced the issue and Henry Morgenthau, jr., was named to the job.

The gentle little man—he was "Wee Willie" from the moment he capered, smiling into town—encountered difficulties. Within 48 hours of the oath-taking ceremony the President proclaimed the bank holiday. Always important, the Treasury became of first rank, save only the White House itself. Woodin was neither financier nor banker, nor claimed to be.

"I'm a Salesman."

"I am a salesman," he told newspapermen last spring when the going was hard and resignation rumors were flying.

A glance at the record of his American Car & Foundry Co. will demonstrate that Woodin's estimate of his own gifts was a good one. It is said of Woodin that he could sell bridges—or mountain chains.

Woodin's cabient start was somewhat inauspicious. Confirmation was almost held up on the complaint of Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, that Woodin was a House-of-Morgan-man. Democrats denied it. And in May real trouble came. Woodin was shown to have been favored on four of the six J. P. Morgan & Co., "bargain stock" lists, revealed by Senate stock market investigators. He received 1,000 shares each of Alleghany Corporation, Johns-Manville, Standard Brands and United Corporation securities at less than market prices.

"I believe that the stock is selling in the market around $35 to $37 a share," William Ewing, Morgan partner, wrote Woodin in February, 1929, in offering a 1,000-share bargain in Alleghany Corporation at $20.

"Just Thinking of You."

"There are no strings tied to this stock," Ewing continued, "so you can sell it whenever you wish. We just want you to know that we were thinking of you."

It is to be hoped Woodin sold. The stock was quoted around $1 when the foregoing letter was made public last May.

If the bargain buys were not enough, Woodin's American Car & Foundry was named in the select list of corporations which maintained $1,000,000 daily balances with the Morgan bank. Senators heard and vowed they would force Woodin to resign this winter if he did not leave sooner.

Woodin probably could not have survived the storm. Proficiency with the violin, zither and guitar would not have saved him, nor would authorship of "Raggedy-Ann" and other jingly ditties. He was, in fact, ill from the start and sometimes called newspaper reporters to his sick room. But it was not to discuss banks or finance.

"Listen to this," said the little man as a phonograph began to blare a martial tune on one such occasion.

"I just Wrote It."

"It is the 'New York Fire Department March,'" Woodin explained. "I just wrote it and this is the first orchestration."

The first time Woodin appeared before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, Clerk William L. Hill seized him by the arm and ushered him out the door under the impression the Secretary was a gate crasher. And there were other troubles.

"Carter, call me Will," said the Secretary to Senator Glass. But the little Virginian would not.

At the White House all was different. There, it was "Will and Frank."

U. S. to Spend 50 Millions for Inferior Farms

Roosevelt Approves Plan to Retire Weak Lands From Production.

time when a more permanent land policy could be devised.

3 Major Regions Involved.

That time has now come. For some weeks past Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Assistant Secretary Tugwell, and even the White House have been preparing the way by talking up the land retirement plan. Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday took up the theme in her weekly press conference and urged thoughtful consideration of it.

Department of Agriculture experts estimate that one-seventh of the entire farm land of the country will have to be retired to balance production with present demand, without making allowance for future improved crop efficiency.

Three major regions have been spotted in the preliminary surveys of government experts as offering possibilities in this transplanting experiment. One is the eastern Appalachian highland. Sections of this land are judged to be not only of low original fertility but to have been further depleted by overcropping for years and by deforestation and erosion. Sections of the Piedmont and the coastal plain also are grouped in this area.

Gradual Purchases Proposed.

The second region lies in the cut-over lands along the Great Lakes from Michigan to Minnesota. Many settlers, enticed into these cut-over timber lands by real estate promoters, are faced with a hopeless fight to eke a living from miserly soil.

The thrid area is in the West, along the Western border of the Great Plains. Much of this land had to be irrigated before it could be used and the overhead is frequently too heavy to make farming profitable.

Officials are anxious to avoid any appearance of proposing to transplant communities arbitrarily and forcibly. They expect to move gradually and only after local sympathy and support have been won. Here is where difficulties may be expected. For while individual farmers may in many cases be glad to have the Government buy them out, communities dependent upon them, with business men, doctors, lawyers, insurance agents, may put up vigorous protests at such a threat to their sources of livelihood.

Program Held Necessary.

When it is recalled what shrieks of anguish came from some Oklahoma members of Congress after Secretary of the Interior Ickes had suggested transplanting farmers in one difficult section, the possibilities of opposition to the Government's plant are apparent.

Yet Administration officials are firmly convinced that such a program as this is the only salvation for all farmers. While they want to make the cure as agreeable as possible, they are nevertheless firmly insistent that, with no prospect of revived export markets, the agriculutral plant of the country must be pulled down and that the place ot begin is on the worst land.

Farmers bought out would be free to locate anywhere they chose. While it is not expected the Government will assume any obligation to reestablish them on new farms, it is the thought that much advisory assistance can be given and perhaps more material aid in the cases of some who would be willing to locate on subsistence homsteads.

More City Jobs Expected.

There is also the prospect that part of the slack will be taken up automotically when some of the 2,000,000 persons who went back to the farm during the depression are again attracted to the city by the opening up of new jobs. In any event it is not the purpose to tear families apart or to disperse neighbors or to root families out of farm homes if they wish to cling to them for sentimental reasons. It is not intended to be a new deal version of the tragic story of the Arcadians in Longfellow's "Evangeline."

Retired land will be turned into National parks or forests, used for improving the condition of Indians, or blanketed back into the public domain and left to lie until some future day when perhaps the growth of the country or the opening of new world markets will make it worth while to put the plow to it again.

Suit Lays Rum Default To McCormick Estate

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP).—A bill seeking $450,000 from the estate of Leander J. McCormick, one of the founders of the McCormick harvester dynasty, was filed by an attorney today claiming breach of contract in a liquor deal.

Attorney J. B. Lowenstein, in the bill filed by Attorney A. P. Feigen claimed that the estate, represented by Charles J. Donnelly, the manager, contracted on December 11 to sell warehouse certificates for 150,000 cases of liquor, but had broken the agreement.

Falling Wall Injures Seven.

Walnut Cove, N. C., Jan. 2 (AP).—Seven men were injured, one seriously, when a 30-foot wall of a blazing building occupied by a wholesale grocery company fell on firemen and CCC camp boys who were fighting the fire here today.

U. S. Protests Cut to 30 Pct. In Interest on German Bonds

arily to modify a loan contract the modification should be discussed and agreed upon by both debtor and creditor.

Hint of a threat is contained in the contention, believed included in instructions to Ambassador Dodd, that unilateral decisions tend to undermine the credit of the debtor and make international credit operations difficult.

This government is troubled also at the way the Reichsbank ignored the claim by American creditors, that payment in marks does not satisfy an obligation incurred in foreign currency. This claim arises from the fact that mark payments, made in Germany, can not be taken abroad and are therefore useless to most bondholders.

Ambassador Dodd was also requested to ask detailed information on the sums made available during the past two years for the repurchase of German securities issued in the United States.

Believe Bonds Bought.

Behind this request lies the belief that at least some of the available foreign exchange withheld on interest and amortization payments has been utilized to buy back bonds at bargain prices, it was understood yesterday.

On December 26 the Housing Reality Improvement Co., of Berlin, announced through an American bondhouse it was prepared to repurchase its 7 per cent bonds at $450 per $1,000 bond, provided at least half a million dollars worth were offered at this figure before January 20. Considering the present exchange rate for dollars against marks, this offer means the company is willing to offer approximately 1,200 marks for every $4,200 received at the time the bonds were issued.

It is felt here that diversion of any foreign exchange from already insufficient interest and amortization accounts for the repurchase of securities before the regular call date is unfair to bondholders.

Values Artificial.

Particularly unjust is the action of the German government in the view of well-informed observers here, since the depreciated values obtaining for German bonds are artificial and result solely from the Reich government's refusal to permit full payment of interest.

American creditors have already been subjected to enough discrimination, the Department is believed to hold, by reason of the special arrangements Germany has concluded with the Swiss and Dutch governments.

Reduction of the cash portion of interest payments during the ensuing half year amounts to reducing the interest rate from 7 per cent to 4.55 per cent.

Representatives of American bondholders protested in Berlin at the time the new regulations were issued, claiming no valid case had been made out by the Reichsbank for further reduction in interest payments.

German justification for the step contained in a statement issued on December 18 by Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, contained the following figures:

Total German foreign debt service amounts to Reich marks, 1,497,000,000 annually. Reich marks 520,000,000 is derived from invisible exports and 977,000,000 from the regular export surplus. This means the Reich must show a monthly export surplus of Reich marks 74,000,000, taking into account the low price of dollars. On the former 50-50 basis, only half of this, or Reich marks 37,000,000 were required, which was seemingly more than covered by the June-to-November average export balance of Reich marks 65,000,000 per month.

Millions in "Blocked Marks."

In fact, however, according to Schacht, Rm. 200,000,000 of the 327,000,000 surplus realized in those six months were "blocked marks," the marks which it has been impossible to transfer abroad the past two years and which have been swapped around among foreign creditors and debtors. Thus only Rm. 127,000,000 or approximately Rm. 25,000,000 monthly, was available in foreign exchange for servicing bonds. This is the 30 per cent now offered. He added that the boycott against German shipping had reduced invisible exports heavily, further complicating his problem.

One reason the State Department intervened so sharply on behalf of indignant bondholders was the unilateral nature of the Reichsbank's action. To avoid establishing a precedent possibly useful to other foreign debtors of the United States or its citizens, the department wishes to head off this new technique before it becomes popular.

Doubt exists, however, as to just what can be done besides registering a protest. Effective pressure would be hard to find, it is believed.

Further Cuts Foreseen.

Berlin, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Further drastic cuts in Germany's payments on debt services involving thousands of American and other foreign investors, were foreshadowed by a Reichsbank statement today on the Reich's currency situation.

Restrictions on transfers of money abroad affecting short-term and the "stand still" or moratorium agreements expiring the end of February, were seen presaged in the vital financial document.

Defending the recent cut on long-term loan transfers to 30 per cent of the services due—the other 70 per cent to be paid in scrip—the Reichsbank statement said no other alternative was possible. The action has been generally criticized in the United States and Britain.

Far from receding from this position in the face of attacks abroad, however, the statement said that unless Germany's trade balance increases in her favor, the short-term creditors may face reductions.

Berlin, January 2 (AP).—American Ambassador Dodd called at the Reichsbank today with the intention of seeking a change in a recent Reichsbank declaration of a moratorium on foreign debt payments, but the absence of bank officials led him to make arrangements for another conference later.

Doctor Coughs So Hard He Cracks a Rib!

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Dr. S. Trimble, Burnsville physician, is claiming the coughing championship of Braxton County and believes he stands a chance of getting State honors.

Ill of influenza at his home, Dr. Trimble told friends he believed he coughed harder than any man in the State.

Dr. E. T. W. Hall, of the Weston City Hospital, attended him a few days later and said that Dr. Trimble probably was correct.

Dr. Hall discovered that Dr. Trimble had coughed so hard he had broken a rib.

Radio Manufacturer's Daughter Gets Divorce

Cincinnati, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Mrs. Page Crosley Shelton, 21, daughter of Power Crosley, jr., president of the Crosley Radio Corporation, was granted a divorce today from Gilman Lee Shelton, 23. Mrs. Shelton charged gross neglect.

Mr. and Mrs. Crosley were in court to testify. Mrs. Shelton was not present. The Crosleys said they had supported Shelton and their daughter since they were married secretly at Newport, Ky., in 1931.

Midwesterner Afoul Code.

Chillicothe, Mo., Jan. 2 (U.P.).—J. S. Moore, first man to be arrested in the Middlewest on charges of violating an NRA code, made $1,000 bond here today on charges of violating price provisions. He was ordered to appear in Federal court here May 28.

Assembly Meets In Arkansas

155 Million Road Debt Threatens "Chaos," Governor Says.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 2 (AP). Warned by Gov. J. M. Futrell that disaster faced the State unless its $155,000,000 highway debt was refunded, the Arkansas Legislature met today in special session.

Speaker H. K. Toney also told the House of Representatives that "the honor and credit of the State must be preserved, despite the fact I have no consideration for those 'Yankee' bondholders who have sued us in the Supreme Court of the United States and in our Federal courts."

The governor painted a picture of chaos in road districts of more than 60 counties, should the district debt question not be settled.

"If the law of foreclosures is enforced," he declared, "it means confiscation of homes in more than 60 counties. If the law of foreclosures be defeated, defiance of and disregard for law will do it. Either course will bring to the State its greatest disaster."

Referring to a refunding measure embodying an agreement with representatives of bondholders, Gov. Futrell said it "does not meet my approval absolutely," but that it added it represented the best terms his committee thought could be obtained. He said he believed the bondholders had made concessions.

Girl Kills Mexican Judge.

Morelia, Mexico, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Judge Adalberto Gracia de Leon, member of one of the most prominent families in the state of Michoacan, was shot and killed today by his stenographer, Maria Bravo Vaquero, 20. She said he had been paying unwelcome attention to her.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Kay Boyle, Poet.

Kay Boyle makes the stone of bitterness flower into a very tender, very lovely blossom. As one of her characters says, "You came to me for comfort.* * * and the only comfort I could ever see for a man's soul is the truth wrung out of it, no matter how bitter it may sound."

In "Gentlemen, I Address You Privately" (Smith & Haas, $2.50), she affirms this curing by antibodies, this giving life by means of small doses of poison. With sly, strange injections of unpleasantness, of overpowering disappointment and repellency, she sets up in the blood a kind of excitement which is caused by few other writers. If her power is wayward, her work is none the less brilliant. It is only an irrelevant limitation on this book that its pages are not for the young, not for the idealistic.

The novel tells of Munday, a tall, stalwart man, an exile from his intended career as a priest, finding himself in a town on the coast of Normandy. The sudden range of life open to him is almost too intoxicating. But music and his piano stand as his props, as his only attachment until he comes upon Ayton, a shifty and wholly irresponsible young wanderer with a curious flame of beauty behind his light eyes.

Even the thoughtless cruelty of Ayton does not mar his charmed hold on Munday. When the hue and cry of the law over some past thievery comes close to Ayton, the two flee to the cabin of a squatter, Quespelle, and his wife, Leonie. And when it catches at Ayton's coat tails, he betrays all the kindness shown him by his friends, sells Munday's piano secretly, and runs off to Italy on the proceeds.

• • • •

It is, as I have said, not a pleasant book. The reader may not care for the strange and tragic central theme. He may not enjoy certain scenes of cruelty, or certain of the characters whom we are a little too glibly accustomed to call sordid.

But the reader is bound to feel in this book the "painful brilliance of living." There is a sharp reality in Miss Boyle's dissections, there is a fever in her style. It is as if she wrote from a sick-bed, sensing and catching the world with a mind stripped to the quick, quivering at the slightest touch. It is as if she endowed the world with her own feverish intensity. All this the reader will feel. The inoculation will enter into him.

In this order Miss Boyle's powers ascend—as a novelist, as a writer of short stories, and as a poet. For in certain stories inserted in the course of the novel there is shown a better and more vitally robust craftsmanship than in the whole. The tale told by old Rochereau, the land-owning editor, and the one by Leonie, as well as the incident of the 'gendarme and the saucepans and even the oddly relevant account of the death of Rasputin—these are notably excellent and satisfying.

And yet she is strongest of all as a poet. Everything she touches, from cabbages and the mangled body of a rabbit to a sunset, becomes an involved and wondrous metaphor, individually beautiful. There is always that prime quality, even if at times the metaphor seems strained and overingenious and becomes a pure Elizabethan "conceit." Clouds are "canny," the storm has an "ecclesiastical wrath," and "June was coming to an end in a stew of clouds, of sunsets red as carrots, of moons peeled off like onions in the heat." Weather and the Brittany landscape shake her with ecstasy.

Poetry, then, was her chief aim. She herself has written in another place: "The short story and novel form are adequate finger exercises, but I, for one, am working toward a broad and pure poetic form." Thus advancing, Miss Boyle is at her happiest, and the reader also.

Lists of the Best.

It would be a bad day for book columns, not to speak of the publishing business, if everyone took to heart Emerson's advice: "Never read any book that is not a year old."

But the kernel of truth sprouting impudently therein is that the best books are not always necessarily those fresh from the presses. A book two, three, four, even five years out will still be eminently worth the modern reader's attention. Especially if it deals with a topic which may be a personal hobby.

From time to time, with due intervals for recuperation in between, this column plans to list the best books in print on a number of appealing subjects. These will range from chess to period furniture, from sailboats to typography, from cook books to modern painting. Needless to say, suggestions both vague and specific will be welcomed delightedly.

A list of books about games, showing the most various ways to amuse yourself and your friends indoors, is now in preparation and will appear soon.

St. Louis Police Herd Cows Spilled in Crash

St. Louis, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Alonzo Arwood, of Centerville, Mo., drove his cattle truck to town today and collided with a street car, spilling some ten head.

Away the cattle went, police in hot pursuit. The police, operating from scout cars, won, and herded the cattle into custody again.

Professor's Son Dies After Overexertion

Norman, Okla., Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Joseph Thuringer, 13, son of a University of Oklahoma medical school professor, was dead here today after apparent overexertion in a basket ball game.

The youth, suffering from asthma, collapsed in the university fieldhouse after a game.

Ganna Walska Pleads for Art; Wants Her Divorces Forgotten

Critics Expect Too Much, But Singer Hopes to Please Them.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Ganna Walska wants the critics to judge her by her singing and not by the number of her marriages and divorces.

And she is a modest singer, she insisted today. All she wants to do, she said, is show in her future concerts that she has improved—"like a student."

"Critics in America are fair," she added, "but because I am known they expect from me all they would expect from the biggest singer who fills Carnegie Hall. If I did not marry the richest man in America, I wouldn't fill Carnegie Hall.

Bewails Publicity.

"People have come to hear me because my name was always on the front pages, unfortunately, but the critics take that as though it were my fault.

"There's nothing to do but take it nicely—but what that has cost me."

Mme. Walska, seated in her Park avenue home, became too interested in her conversation to take off her hat and coat. Under a hat shaped like a Russian crown, with the merest breath of a veil, her face was animated, her eyes sparkling. She talked rapidly, now and then throwing a a French word when she could not think of an English one.

The noted beauty, former wife of Harold McCormick, will keep on singing until she convinces the critics, she said.

Not a Fool, She Says.

"Everybody agrees that I am not stupid in life, not a fool generally," she declared. "If I knew there was nothing in me, I wouldn't do this, because it is misery to be a singer. It is terrible."

She looked at her furry, light gray carriage boots.

"If you do a thing conscientiously for 15 years, you can't be just bad. It is impossible. There must be some part good.

"And now also it is vanity, too. I want to show people that they are wrong. I am not so nervous about critics. Early in my life I had such stage fright I couldn't sing if critics were there. I would be paralyzed. Now I have lost that."

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

THOSE EGG-SHAPED AUTOS.

One of the best signs the depression is over is that the automobile manufacturers are going to the expense of twisting their cars into newer and funnier shapes again.

• • • •

The 1934 models are decidedly New Deal buggies. They violate tradition so completely that you can't escape the suspicion that the Columbia professors now serving at Washington had something to do with them.

• • • •

One tendency in design has not been changed, however. The designers seem more determined than ever that no one except a midget can get in and out without a head bruise.

• • • •

1934 will be an aerodynamics year. Nearly all the cars look like a submarine gone dry. So much attention has been paid to wind resistance that the designers would appear to have expected a year of big winds on all highways.

• • • •

It looks like a tough year for pedestrians. They have suffered everything else for the past 20 years, but up to now have never had to fear being torpedoed right in the middle of the car tracks.

• • • •

Everything is streamline except the monkey wrench.

• • • •

One company has done away with front springs and substituted "knees."

• • • •

This is going to cause a lot of trouble in America during 1934 when a wife comes into a room where her husband is talking with the repair station and hears him say, "Look over her knees carefully for me, will you, Gus?"

• • • •

Strangely enough, no car builder has had sense enough to turn out a car with what it has always needed more than anything else in modern congestion—elbows.

• • • •

A car with a good pair of chromium elbows for use in Sunday traffic jams would be priceless.

• • • •

And, oh, yes, the 1934 boilers will in many cases be radio equipped. This is going to make motoring pretty terrible. It's been difficult enough taking the family on a motor trip without standing the strain of a constant battle among the kids whether to tune in on Uncle Don, Bing Crosby or the Marine Band.

• • • •

Why buy a new auto? Why not have your cabinet radio put on a stock chassis and fitted with a gas tank?

THE HITCH.

Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale, says there are only 19 men in the United States who understand what money is. And if they had any they could prove it.

President Roosevelt's fan mail amounts to 18,000 letters a day. Most of the country's mail is now evenly distributed between Father Coughlin, the President and Santa Claus.

THE NEW MONEY DEAL NOMENCLATURE.

Elmer Twitchell predicts that in two years the old coins such as dimes, quarters, nickels and dollars will be known as fishercoins, warrenickels, wheelerkins and berles.

Those revelations of graft in the leasing of newsstands in New York should inspire somebody to write an inspirational book for juveniles, entitled "Steve, the Ragged Newsboy," or "Up From $8,000 to Riches."

The new automobile models must make Barney Oldfield and those other fellows who used to race those funny-looking cars 20 years ago think they were just ahead of their time.

Former Detective's Son Held in Slaying

Accused of Manslaughter in Reveler's Death.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 2 (U.P.).—A manslaughter charge was drawn here today against Addison Nedeau, 23, son of a former chief of detectives here, in connection with the fatal shooting of Mrs. C. E. Potts after a New Year dance.

Mrs. Potts was shot as the car in which she and her husband were returning from a dance was sideswiped by another car.

Nedeau, taken to the police station by his father, Ed Nedeau, said he fired in the air and did not realize he had shot anyone.

Oil Well Fire Tamed.

Oklahoma City, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Firemen and oil field workers shut in the flaming Frank Russell Petroleum Co.'s No. 1 Reno Well in the Oklahoma City Oil Field today after it had burned four hours after an explosion.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

The Hangman.

He wouldn't tell his name
Or the place from whence he came.
He went about his business
In a sullen, ghastly way;
Built a trestle and a noose
On a rope which dangled loose,
For he'd come to hang a felon
At the dawning of the day.

He was business-like and grim
And to all who spoke to him
He was terse and crisp and surly,
As a hangman ought to be.
He attached each leather strap
And death's black and solemn cap
In a most efficient manner
As the witnesses could see.

Then he threw the bar aside
And a human being died,
But he made no sign of pity,
Was it wrong or was it right?
Ere the little room had cleared
He had swiftly disappeared
And was on his way to somewhere
In the blackness of the night.

Oh, I know that there must be
Men to build the gallows tree,
Knot the noose and pull the lever
When the laws a man condemn,
But I wonder as they go
If the hangman's loved ones know
How he makes that extra money
Which he somestimes brings to them?

Four More Arrested In Missouri Lynching

St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 2 (AP).—The number accused of first-degree murder in the lynching here November 28 of Lloyd Warner, 19, Negro, mounted to seven with the arrest today of Joseph Eder, jr., and Jack Hamer, both of St. Joseph; Jess Davison, of Fillmore, Mo., and Raymond Young, of Savannah, Mo.

The four were arraigned and, in default of $10,000 bond each, all went to jail. Warner was hanged and his body burned. He was accused of assaulting a white girl.

Chain Gang Fugitive Shot, Another Sought

Tallahassee, Fla., Jan. 2 (AP).—J. W. Thompson, serving five years for breaking and entering in Escambia County, was shot and wounded at a prison camp in Washington County yesterday while trying to escape. He was taken to a hospital.

Alton Taylor, serving 12 years for breaking and entering in Duval County, fled with Thompson and has not been recaptured.

Boarding House Fire Kills Woman, Child

Cleveland, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Two persons were burned to death and three others were injured when fire swept through a boarding house here today. The dead were Mrs. Vivian Mantell, 62, and June Parson, 2.

Mrs. Gertrude Bailey and Fay Jordan were injured in jumping from upper story windows. Lillian Parson, sister of the dead child, was burned seriously.

TO MEN, WOMEN, BOYS AND GIRLS . . . NOTHING TO BUY . . . ANYONE CAN ENTER AND IT'S LOADS OF FUN!

Do you like to form words? See how many you can create? Here's a word-building contest more fascinating—more exciting—more novel—than any you've tried before. It's new! It's different! And there are twenty-five handsome prizes for the most skilful!

Here's the Story!

The American Oil Company manufactures a full line of petroleum products. Among them—special motor fuel, gasoline, lubricating oils, greases, dry cleaning solvents, insecticides and other specialties.

As might be expected from so large and so progressive an institution, we create new products from time to time. These require names. Coined names. And we prefer them to be coined from the great family name—"AMERICAN OIL COMPANY". Like "AMOCO", which is the trade name for our special motor fuel and motor oils. So - - -

Here's the Contest!

To those persons who will give us the best list of coined names made up from the letters in any or all of the words "AMERICAN OIL COMPANY" we will award a series of worthwhile prizes. Words must be of three or more letters. You are free to create as many coined words as you wish but the prizes will be bestowed on the basis of quality as well as quantity.

Another thing: We will permit you to add as the final letter in any coined word any one of the letters in the alphabet not included in the name "AMERICAN OIL COMPANY". Let us illustrate: Our famous AMOCO-GAS (sample not to be used), the original special motor fuel, derives its name from the first two letters in "American"—the "O" in "Oil"—and the "CO" in "Company". But our insecticide—AMOX (sample name not to be used), acquired the first three letters of its name in the same way but "X" was added on the end.

Now Let's Go!

Just think of the handsome prizes that await the winners. And the number of them! Everybody has a chance—men—women—boys and girls. And to make it easy for you in forming names, we have prepared a perforated card containing the letters in the name "AMERICAN OIL COMPANY". Break up the card—move the letters around—it's like playing with a jig-saw puzzle. Interesting—and loads of fun!

Now read the rules. Then hurry to your nearest American Oil Company filling station or dealer for your entry blank and perforated card. Everyone has a chance to win!

★ Rules of Contest

1 No one person entitled to more than one prize.
2 Contest Blank on which the coined words must be submitted can be obtained from any American Oil Company station or from any dealer handling American Oil Company products. You don't have to buy anything.
3 Decision of judges as to best list of coined words will be final, and winners will be announced as soon as a decision has been reached by the judges.
4 No employee of the American Oil Company or his immediate family—or its advertising agents—shall be permitted to enter the contest.
5 All coined words submitted, whether by prize-winner or not, become the property of the American Oil Company, and may be used by it at any future time.
*6 Contest closes January 31st, 1934—midnight. Contest blanks must be mailed and postmarked before January 31st, midnight, to Word Building Contest, The American Oil Company, American Building, Baltimore, Maryland.
7 Entrants may submit as many words or groups of words as desired.
8 Only letters in the words "AMERICAN OIL COMPANY" may be used with the exception of one additional final letter which you are privileged to select. (See paragraph 5 this advertisement).

Court Will Get Albemarle Row Over New Rule

Treasurer Still Refuses to Yield Office or Funds Control.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Albemarle County had a nice bank account, but could not get at it today to make a scheduled purchase of approximately $50,000 in Albemarle district bonds. The controversy between County Treasurer Stuart Hamm, who has refused to turn over his office to the new government—which is represented by County Executive Henry Haden and the six supervisors—was the cause of this tie-up.

Acting on the advice of counsel, the National Bank & Trust Co., of Charlottesville, repository for county funds, refused to honor any checks for the bonds not signed by both Hamm and Haden.

The supervisors finally consented to this and set about late today to get Hamm to sign. Hamm said he would not, asserting such action would indicate "recognition of the supervisors' rights to remove me from office before the expiration of my term, December 31, 1935."

The treasurer awaited ouster proceedings, which the supervisors intend to bring through their new county attorney, Maj. John S. Graves. The latter indicated he would take mandamus proceedings to the Virginia supreme court at its meeting this month.

Hamm has consistently declined to surrender the office and accept a subordinate place in the department of finance at $200 a month. He says he will fight the issue on constitutional grounds.

Lady Astor's Brother in Albemarle County Fight

Rites at Berryville For Miss Nora Ward

Berryville, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Funeral rites were conducted today from the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Walter Brotherton, for Miss Nora Ward, 65, retired school teacher.

Miss Ward was a daughter of the late Simeon and Emma Ward, members of a prominent Clarke County and Hampshire County, W. Va., family. She was a teacher for nearly 25 years.

She is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Walter Brotherton and Mrs. Barrett, of Clarke County, and Mrs. Gertrude Coffman, of Somerset, Pa.

Methodist School Opens January 14

6-Day Session Scheduled at Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—A six-day training school for Roanoke, Vinton and Roanoke circuit Methodist Churches, will begin at Trinity Church here January 14. The faculty will include prominent Methodists, among them Dr. H. H. Sherman, of Front Royal, executive secretary of the board of Christian education, Baltimore Conference, and former pastor of Trinity Church; Dr. John William Smith, pastor of Centenary Church, Richmond, and former pastor of Greene Memorial Church here.

Charles G. Steele, superintendent of the Greene Memorial Sunday school is chairman of the church school board of managers and Miss Ella Clark, registrar and secretary-treasurer. John E. Easter is librarian.

Following the training school the seventh extension school will be held, beginning January 25, with classes on six consecutive Thursdays. The Rev. Mr. Deal, pastor of the Vinton Methodist church, will be educational director.

2 Maryland Cities Will Get Survey

Hagerstown and Frederick Home Data Sought.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Hagerstown is one of two Maryland cities selected of a group of 63 in the United States where a real property inventory will be taken under the Civil Works Administration. Frederick is the other city.

Approximately 12,000 men will get work for six weeks in this project. They will secure data on location, occupancy, and extent of double-up conditions. Field work must be completed by February 15.

The data will assist Congress in planning legislation for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and other public and private credit agencies as a basis for more intelligent extension of credit.

Dr. Samuel W. Glasscock Dies.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Dr. Samuel W. Glasscock, 68, osteopath, who had practiced here for 22 years, died yesterday. Dr. Glasscock was born in Monroe, Mo.

Virginia Starts 4 More PWA Projects Soon

$2,850,000 Will Be Cost; 60 Plans Awaiting Approval.

Richmond, Jan. 2 (AP).—The State advisory committee on public works today announced four Virginia PWA projects, to cost $2,850,000, will start within two weeks; that five projects costing nearly $1,200,000 are under way; that more than 60 are waiting approval in Washington, and that the city of Harrisonburg has applied for a loan and grant of $50,000.

The four new projects will provide work for hundreds of men; the five already under way are working nearly 300 men, and many more would be employed by the proposed projects.

The Harrisonburg application asked money for the construction of a submerged dam as an extension to the existing waterworks system. As security the applicant plans revenue bonds bearing 4 per cent interest, secured by a pledge of the revenues from the proposed extension of the system.

The four new projects are in Arlington, Amherst and Nelson Counties and the City of Alexandria. Arlington County is building a $2,500,000 sewer system; Alexandria is doing street paving and sewer work, and Amherst and Nelson Counties are building school additions.

The five projects already under way are at the University of Virginia Art Museum, the Pulaski bridges, the Culpeper municipal power plant, Lynchburg sewer improvements, and the Williamsburg waterworks and sewer improvements.

15 New W. Va. Jobs Will Employ 829

Both Men and Women Aided by Projects.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Fifteen additional projects providing jobs for 829 men and women have been approved by the State Civil Works Administration. The counties affected, the projects and the number to be employed follow:

Gilmer, sewage project near Glenville, 38 men; McDowell, sewing project, 120 women; Wayne, removal of school buildings, 22 men; Hampshire, grading Hampshire High School athletic field, 83 men; Pleasants, work on community building and park landscaping at St. Marys, 50 men; Wetzel, feeding children and nursery schools, 20 persons; Ohio, repairs at West Liberty State Teachers College, 124 men; Raleigh, painting and repairing Rutherford Sanitarium at Beckley, 66 men.

Fayette, repairs to McKendree Hospital, 44 men; Taylor, county sanitation project, 15 men, and street wall and grading work, 115 men; Putnam, street improvements at Nitro, 28 men; Nicholas, health and feeding children service, 9 persons; Greenbrier, bedside and other nursing, 5 nurses.

West Virginia Lumber Men Will Meet Jan. 22

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—National and State codes for the industry will be discussed at the Twenty-first annual meeting of the West Virginia Lumber and Builders' Supply Association January 22 and 23 at Charleston, it is announced by W. Guy Crigler, of Fairmont, secretary. L. I. McQueen, secretary of the National Builders' Supply Code Authority, will be the chief speaker.

The association is the designated code authority for the retail lumber and building material business for Division 27, which embraces West Virginia.

67 Attend Every Sunday.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Fairview Christian Church school had 67 members who did not miss a Sunday in 1933. The average attandance was 641, a gain of 30 over the previous year. George C. Dalton is director of the school.

Girl Found Dazed, Injured at River

Police Delve Into Mystery in West Virginia.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Found unconscious on the bank of the Tygarts Valley River today, Miss Virginia Wooddell, 24, a bank bookkeeper, was brought to her home here this afternoon while State and local police are investigating the cause of her injuries.

The young woman, who is the daughter of James W. Wooddell, Clarksburg hotel proprietor, has been visiting in Preston County.

How she was injured and got into the river is a mystery. Apparently she had pulled herself from the stream by a tree branch.

U. S. Farm Help Is Temporary, Virginians Told

Official Reminds Federal Plan Merely Awaits Tariff Change.

Richmond, Jan. 2 (AP).—Henry M. Taylor, Federal-State agricultural statistician, today described the Virginia farm benefit plan as "an emergency internal tariff imposed to equalize a price system thrown disastrously out of gear by now discredited foreign tariff policies."

He said business men and farmers should remember it is an emergency move and purely a temporary policy, a corrective measure to forestall calamity.

Under the plan, Virginia farmers are obtaining through the processing taxes about one-sixth of the value of their products.

Mr. Taylor said Secretary Wallace has indicated the policy is to be maintained only until there is an adjustment of foreign tariffs or a permanent system of planned agricultural production in America—or a combination of the two.

He said if the tariffs can be adjusted to restore "a now utterly collapsed foreign market, American farmers with the market for their surplus restored can carry on as before with some prospect of making a decent living."

The statistician asserted previous tariff plans resulted in the loss of foreign trade and collapse of prices for growers of cotton, tobacco, wheat and live stock among other products.

Moonshiner Error Blamed for Blaze

Fired Office in Revenge, Minister Believes.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Moonshiners, mistaken in their belief he aided recent liquor raids, were blamed yesterday by Dr. C. W. Fleenor, of Bristol, for a fire that destroyed his office building at Fleenora Park, summer resort in Holston Valley.

Dr. Fleenor said he was informed the men believed he was helping police seize stills.

He estimated his loss at $1,000, not covered by insurance.

Robbers Break Into 5 Charlottesville Shops

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Five stores on Main street were robbed Sunday night. The Milady shop, one of the places looted, had been robbed Thanksgiving night, when the loss there was $1,000. The Apex Beauty Shop, Community Cafe, Coles' Barber Shop and a restaurant also were robbed Sunday. The loss at each store was small.

Chancellor Woman Buried.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for Miss Alice Pritchett, lifelong resident of Chancellor.

Miss Pricthett is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Mollie Talley and Mrs. Maude Houser, and one brother, S. L. Pritchett, all of Chancellor. Services were conducted by the Rev. Guy Foster.

Foshay Serum Saves Victim Of Tularemia

Troutville, Va., Physician Employs Treatment Successfully.

Troutville, Va., Jan. 2 (AP).—An antitularemia serum, which has brought about almost complete recovery from the disease within ten days in some cases, has been administered successfully by Dr. S. F. Driver, of Troutville.

Originated by Dr. Lee Foshay, of Cincinnati, the serum is said to be most effective when administered within 10 days after the patient becomes ill. The treatment has been described in medical journals, but so far as can be learned, Howard Duncan, of Fincastle, was the first person in this section to be treated.

Duncan had been ill nine days when the serum was sent by Dr. Forshay in response to a telegram from Dr. Driver. An injection was made on the ninth and tenth days, December 19 and 20, and Duncan has practically recovered, it was said. All glands except two have returned to normal proportions, Dr. Driver said today.

Tularemia, when allowed to run its course, will last from six months to a year, the doctor said and some cases have been known to last three years. Often the victims die and if they recover they are sometimes left in a weakened condition.

Trouble Stories Blamed in Suicide

Hagerstown Man Fretted Over Others' Affairs.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Listening to troubles of others in connection with his post as manager of a loan company here, was blamed by his family and friends for the suicide today in Frederick of Gorman C. Brandenburg, 41, of Hagerstown. Friends declared that in recent weeks he talked rarely of anything but the depression.

The body of Brandenburg, former president of the Hagerstown Monarch Club and the Alsatia Club, was found today in a Frederick hotel room, a bullet in his head and a revolver clutched in his hand. A note had this to say:

"I am leaving this note that no one may be misled by my act. I am taking this step without any coercion from any source and as a result of an analysis of present-day conditions by myself personally."

Hotel Greeters To Visit Roanoke

Formation of Auxiliary Proposed Saturday.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Hotel men from two States Saturday will attend the midwinter meeting of Virginia-North Carolina Chapter, No. 46, Hotel Greeters of America. The visitors will be guests of James S. Clarke, manager of Hotel Patrick Henry, Saturday evening.

Formation of a ladies auxiliary will be considered. The Greeters' annual meeting will be held in Richmond, March 16 and 17.

Hotel men meeting here Saturday took no action with reference to higher rates under the hotel code but two Roanoke hotels announced higher rates following the meeting. About 75 hotels throughout the western part of the State were represented.

Mr. Clarke has been made a member of the Virginia subsidiary hotel code authority.

Bristol Creek Spouts Flames In Freak Fire

Gasoline on Water Is Set Accidentally; Damage Is Slight.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Beaver Creek, flowing through Bristol's business section, became a stream of fire yesterday.

Excitement began at CWA creek headquarters on Eighth street when a Negro workman dropped a match to the water's surface, which was covered with gasoline from a leaking storage tank five blocks away. Seven thousand gallons of gasoline went up in smoke.

Flames rose 25 feet in the air at the first outburst, bursting electric wire insulation overhead. A mile of the creek was ablaze at one time.

"Henry," the Negro laborer, did not stop running until he reached Ashe street and Pennsylvania avenue.

No men were at work in the creek at the time. S. L. Henninger, a foreman, and George Overbay were made ill by gas fumes.

Damage was confined to a scorched railroad trestle near Eighth street and three slightly charred shacks housing three families along the creek.

A portion of Beaver Creek is covered by Piedmont street, one of the principal thoroughfares. As the flames ate their way upstream they ran under the street for several hundred yards, pouring from manholes and terrifying scores of early morning risers.

Worker Asks $100,000 Damages in Dust Suit

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan 2 (Spl.).—Vivian A. Miller, of Gauley Bridge, has filed suit in United States District Court against the Rinehart & Dennis Construction Co., of Charlottesville, Va., for $100,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been received while he was at work in the New-Kanawha Power Co. tunnel at Hawk's Nest.

Miller charges he was permanently injured. The suit is the last of a number instituted against the company for alleged failure to provide ample ventilation against stone dust during the boring of the tunnel, which takes water for a power development project through a mountain.

Fincastle 'Gasser' Misses Schedule

Attacks on Homes Cease After Three.

Fincastle, Va., Jan. 2 (AP).—Botetourt County's stealthy "gasser," whose activities at night have resulted in several persons becoming ill, was due to keep a rendezvous again, according to persons who have noted intervals between the three "attacks" of the past two weeks.

But he failed to appear and while officers investigating the case could not be located, it is believed the person, whether he be "practical joker" or crank, has concluded to call a halt to the series of mysterious attacks.

Two weeks ago Miss Alice Huffman, daughter of Cal Huffman, was overcome by vapor released in the residence at Haymakertown. She continues to have convulsions, her physician said today. The convulsions, it is believed, are not directly attributable to the gas, but are believed due to extreme nervousness induced by the release of the gas in the residence on three separate occasions the evening of December 22.

The next attack was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hall, of Cloverdale, and a third was made upon A. L. Kelly, a Troutville welder, and his mother. All the victims were affected by nausea and were highly nervous for several days.

Confusion Under New Law Brings Respite.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Use of 1933 West Virginia automobile license plates until midnight January 8 is permitted by order of Ernest L. Bailey, State road commissioner, because car owners have been confused over changes in the law.

Delay has been caused in issuance of licenses, Bailey states, because owners failed to make proper application. The new licenses run for only six months, because the Legislature changed the motor license year from calendar to the State fiscal year, which begins July 1.

Motor vehicle owners are required to use the 1933 plates along with a special windshield sticker certifying the payment of the license tax until July 1.

Maryland Farm Woman's Death Baffles Police

Two Freed in Murder Case; Baltimore Officer Joins Inquiry.

Crisfield, Md., Jan. 2 (AP).—The report of Detective Sergt. Walter Martin, Baltimore finger print expert, was awaited by Somerset County authorities, who have been unsuccessful in unraveling the mystery surrounding the murder of Mrs. Margaret Brumbley, 48, farm woman.

Her body, with the head showing two stab wounds and marks of a beating, was found early yesterday in the bedroom by her husband, Fred Brumbley, who told police he did not return home until after midnight New Year's Eve.

Authorities, soon after the discovery, took into custody Sam Jones, Negro, and his son, James Jones, but after hours of questioning they were released. Sam Jones, according to authorities, had been seen near the home the previous day.

Unable to find any lead to the mystery, local officials turned to Baltimore with a request to Police Commissioner Charles D. Gaither for help. Sergt. Martin was sent to assist.

Dr. George Coulbourne, following an examination, said Mrs. Brumbley, mother of five, had not been criminally assaulted. Coroner Fred Holland said it was probable someone forced his way into the house to rob or attack the woman, but was scared away by a passing automobile.

The bedroom was in disorder and indicated a struggle had occurred. The woman's body, partly clothed, lay on the bed. The stab wounds were believed inflicted by an oyster knife.

Brumbley, who notified Sheriff Luther Daugherty, told officers he gained entrance to the house through the little-used front door, which was open.

Firms Defy Law On Convict Labor

Virginia Concerns Want Supreme Court Test.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Although the Hawes-Cooper act was expected to render 1,000 convicts in the West Virginia State Penitentiary jobless this week, two companies employing prisoners announced they would continue operation until the Supreme Court rules on the law. The act restricts interstate shipment of prison-made goods, and went into effect January 1.

The Kleeson Manufacturing Co. and the J. C. Bardall Co., are the concerns continuing prison shop work. They have been employing about 700 men, but gradually reducing their forces.

Dr. C. F. McClintic, warden, announced the Washington Manufacturing Co. abandoned its shops last week. It employed 200 convicts.

The present population of the penitentiary is 1,984 at the prison and 346 in road camps, while about 500 men are confined in county jails awaiting removal to the penitentiary.

Burial in Arlington For Miss Alice Thorp

Funeral services for Miss Alice Thorp, who died Monday at Pikesville, Md., will be held at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow at Arlington Cemetery.

Miss Thorp was the daughter of Col. Frank Thorp, U. S. A., an instructor of the Maryland National Guard, stationed at Pikesville.

Cemetery Group to Meet.

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—The quarterly meeting of the Culpeper Memorial Association, which cares for sections of Fairview Cemetery, will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. W. W. Chelf tomorrow. Plans will be made for spring activities and committee work.

All Fredericksburg CWA Projects Pass

City's First Pay Roll, $600, Issued by Bauman.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—A civil works project for improvements and repairs to the schools here having been sanctioned, District Administrator Ray C. Hopkins announced all Fredericksburg CWA projects have received approval in Richmond.

Fredericksburg's first CWA pay roll, amounting to more than $600, was distributed by Charles F. Bauman, recently appointed assistant disbursing officer for Fredericksburg, and W. F. Carter, jr., assistant deputy administrator.

Stafford and King George County schools will remain closed until January 22, it was announced by Stafford local administrator, James Ashby, yesterday, to allow completion of improvements now underway.

Time will be made up by lengthening the school term. Schools in the two counties have eight-month terms.

Washingtonians Face Virginia Indictments

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Nineteen indictments, all charging felonies, were returned to day by the Rockingham Circuit Court grand jury. Among those indicted were:

Dennis L. Smith, of Washington, and James R. Henkel and Philip Davis, Alexandria, charged with robbing the Merchants Grocery & Hardware Co.; W. E. Dasher, a Washington produce dealer, accused of giving bad checks in buying turkeys; Clarence Williams, colored, of Harrisonburg, for killing his wife.

Man Held in Stabbing At New Year's Frolic

Winchester, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—William Weakley, of Frederick County, was lodged in jail on charges of criminal assault, following the stabbing of Ira Smith on Highland avenue during a New Year's demonstration. Physicians believe Smith will recover.

Police said Weakley told them he did not stab anyone, but some one "may have run into his knife."

Coming of "Let 'em Eat Cake" Calls Attention to Season's Lack of Musicals

The Producers Have Deserted Tuneful Field

Old Masters Dropping Out; Plays on Broadway; Amusement Chat.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

The coming to the National Theater next Monday night of so pretentious a revue as "Let 'Em Eat Cake," the much-discussed sequel to the Pulitzer prize-winning "Of Thee I Sing," paradoxically enough, serves as a reminder of the current season's extraordinary backwardness in the production of musical attractions of the first rank.

Scarcely within the memory of any oldtimer in the theater has a season brought so few musicals to Washington as the present. The paucity, however, is not peculiar to the National Capital. Big musicals just are not being done, for the time being.

The passing of the late Flo Ziegfeld and the quiet evanescence from Broadway of Earl Carroll and George White as specialists in the big girl-and-music shows, have resulted in an obvious dearth of this type of entertainment, both in New York and "on the road." So far this season Washington has had a week of Gilbert and Sullivan old standbys, the socalled "Ziegfeld Follies," in the throes of an impetuous Shubertian preparation, and "Bitter Sweet," whose local reception, for some obscure reason, ired Mr. J. J. Shubert beyond endurance. That is all.

New York No Better Off.

The record in New York is hardly better. Even with the opening on Thursday night at the Winter Garden of the aforesaid "Follies," the coming to Washington of "Let 'em Eat Cake" will leave only five musical attractions on view in Gotham at what should be the height of the season.

Besides the "Follies," the visible musicals along Manhattan's theatrical skyline will include "As Thousands Cheer," the season's smash hit; "Blackbirds," another of Lew Leslies long line of colored revues; "Champagne, Sec," a new version of Strauss' continental operetta, "Die Fledermaus," and "Roberta," a smart musical comedy having to do with the dress-making craft.

As for the "old masters" at this sort of thing, Ziegfeld, of course, has passed from the scene for all time, lamentably and prematurely; Earl Carroll attempted no new "Vanities" this year, but was content to try his hand at a strange combination of melodrama and ribald revue known as "Murder at the Vanities," and the dapper former hoofer, George White, is engaged in Hollywood absorbing trade secrets of the cinema and arranging for a successful transference of his "Scandals" to celluloid, with Rudy Vallee the stellar personality in the screen version.

Those "Good Old Days."

There is talk of a new "Scandals" some time along in the spring, perhaps, but that is an item of scant succor at the moment.

Things were slightly different in the old days when the Shuberts, Klaw & Erlanger, Charles B. Dillingham, Henry W. Savage, Werba & Luescher, the Frohmans and all the rest were busy month in and month out at this sort of thing!

Those were the times when there really was something to whistle besides "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?" "The Last Roundup" and "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?"

Heigh-ho! What's the world coming to—if anything?

Tomorrow a Nation-wide trade preview of "Gallant Lady," latest of the Twentieth Century productions engineered by the Messrs. Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl Zanuck, will be celebrated in 32 key cities. In Washington, the showing will be in the National Theater, beginning at 11 a. m. "Gallant Lady" has Ann Harding as its star, supported by what is reported to be an exceptionally fine cast, led by Clive Brook, Otto Kruger, and Tullo Carminati. In Miss Harding's estimation, so it is said, this is one of the finest pictures in which she ever has appeared. The invitation list for tomorrow's screening includes exhibitors, feature writers, women well known in civic and club life, the dramatic desks of the local press, and numerous others.

From Chicago's Fair.

The living and inanimate displays included in the "Odditorium," featured on the Midway of the recent Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, will reach Washington tonight from Boston, following a three-week engagement in the Hub. The first local exhibition and performance in the Washington Auditorium will be tomorrow at 1 p. m.

The "Odditorium" requires two carloads of equipment, among which are included 18 fully appointed stages for the living wonders and a series of glass cases in which will be exhibited the natural and man-made curiosities. The human oddities are traveling in two Pullman coaches.

Nature's Droll Handiwork.

Outstanding among the attractions seen at the World's Fair, and to be on display here, are John T. Bowers, the man who speaks without vocal cords; E. L. Blystone, rice writer, who inscribes messages on grains of rice, edges of calling cards and even on strands of human hair; Paul Desmuke, armless Texan who performs unbelievable feats with his toes; Singalee, Hindu fire worshiper; Roy Bard, the ossified man; Medusa, half infant and half adult, and Marden J. Laurello, with a "revolving head."

Performances will be continuous, afternoon and evening.

All of which may appeal to some as just a little too disturbingly reminiscent of a picture made by M-G-M not so long ago, called "Freaks."

A Lorelei of the Gaming Tables

That striking brunette beauty of the screen, Miss Kay Francis, her hair silvered to match her gown and her increasing years, in "The House on 56th Street," demonstrates with what skill she is able to grow old effectively for the cameras in a story that spans three generations. "The House on 56th Street" is the current cinema feature at the Earle, where Maestro Ben Bernie and "all the lads" are cavorting tunefully on the stage.

to be dramatic or climactic where it should be. Last act very poor. Miriam Hopkins lovely and good. Settings exquisite. Owen Davis, jr., good, but stiffish."

The New York weather—deleted by censor!

If adoption of the film code under the NRA was expected to whoop up expenditures, the move was an entire success. It is reported in the trade press that adoption of the motion picture code by 14 of the foremost studios on the West Coast had the immediate effect of raising the production budget for the year from $135,000,000 to $147,555,000—or an additional expenditure of $12,555,000. The basic reason ascribed for the increase is an approximate tilt of 15 per cent in wages, supply costs, and general operation.

Prophecy Comes True.

When Jesse L. Lasky took upon himself to see to it that Gene Raymond was accorded proper treatment by the film industry, it was freely predicted that the platinum-haired, male counterpart of Jean Harlow was "going places." One of them turns out to be Europe!

Mr. Raymond, who may be seen romping around on the RKO-Keith screen as one of the major figures in "Flying Down to Rio," will depart these shores on the next trip of the S. S. Bremen for the three-month vacation abroad. He will be accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Mary Kipling, a writer of some renown.

He plans to visit all the important European capitals. From Paris, he will leave for St. Moritz for the winter sports. After a 10-day stay there, Raymond and Mrs. Kipling will motor to Lucerene, Switzerland, to Milan, Cannes, Nice and other points along the French Riviera.

Comprehensive Itinerary.

Several weeks will be spent in Italy, visiting Naples, Sorrento, Capri, Rome, Florence and Venice. They will also stop over in Budapest, Vienna, Prague, Berlin, Copenhagen, Paris and London, finishing off their trip with a tour of rural England.

Raymond and Mrs. Kipling will return to New York on the Bremen, sailing on March 24. Arriving in New York on March 29, Raymond will leave immediately for Hollywood. His contract with Columbia is scheduled to start as soon as he returns.

Old New Year Custom.

And how many times, by now, have you written it "1933?"

Morgan Morgan 6th Dies.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.). Dr. Morgan Morgan 6th, a descendant of Morgan Morgan 2d, first white settler in what now is West Virginia, will be buried Thursday. Dr. Morgan died at a hospital here today. He was 75.

to ring up a clear and resounding bull's-eye!

There can be no gainsaying the cleverness with which Anthony Armstrong worked out the details of his plot in "Ten Minute Alibi," current at the National, but there are still one or two points on which he might have been tripped up in actual police procedure. For instance, what about Colin Derwent's fingerprints on the knobs of the outside doors of the Sevilla flat in Bloomsbury, after he had removed his gloves in the living room? Or don't Scotland Yard men bother with outside doors when the crime is committed in an inside room?

Up and Down Broadway.

Miss Dorothea Lewis, of The Post's reviewing staff, who is doing her Christmas show-shopping up and down Broadway, postcards pinpoint impressions of some of the plays, which we take pleasure in passing on to "her public," as to wit:

"'Dark Tower,' witty, clever, excellently done melodrama, with Basil Sydney elegant—and a weak first act.

"'Ah, Wilderness,' amazing for O'Neill, but disappointing otherwise, except for George M. Cohan, who is quietly superb.

"'Men in White,' splendid, moving, sincere drama.

"'As Thousands Cheer,' grand, deliriously clever fun.

There IS a Natural, Warm Beauty in the Modern Ensemble

As Exemplified in Our Modern Galleries

You will be charmed and perhaps surprised by the informal simplicity of the atmosphere. Each piece of furniture is sveltly distinctive without being artificially sophisticated. And each room is integrated by a subtle and carefully planned color scheme.

The bedroom, for instance, is built around mauve and silver, shading from the delicate orchid in the wall paper to the deep magenta taffeta draperies. The lovely warm effect, created by soft colors, is heightened by the unusual textures and beautiful surfaces; draperies in novelty and rough nubby weaves; floor coverings of specially-designed inlaid linoleums; furniture of exquisitely grained wood.

You will be especially interested in the uses of mirrored cornices and screens, and white lamps; and the ease with which French prints and impressionistic sketches may be harmonized in the modern ensemble.

This Particularly Helpful Feature Should Appeal to You

We will welcome the opportunity to individualize your home, drawing on the same resources that created this ensemble . . . the large and varied stocks carried regularly in our Home Furnishings Sections, and the talent and interest of our Interior Decorating Staff.

Literary Envoys.

In the spring of 1828, Washington Irving, then an attache at our legation in Madrid, took horse for Andalusia to seek out materials for his book on "The Conquest of Granada." The conduct of diplomatic relations, at least those between this country and Spain, was not then the strenuous labor which it has been made by the past century of progress. At Granada the representative of the young Republic of the West fell willing victim to the lures of the old Moorish palace known as the Alhambra. A year later he returned to study its legends, was installed by a courteous Spanish official in the suite once occupied by the beautiful Elizabeth of Parma, and wrote there the book which made the Alhambra known to the world.

The other day another literary envoy of the United States traveled down from Madrid to old Granada and at a great fiesta in Irving's honor dedicated the road which leads to the Alhambra in the name of his famous predecessor. And, as Ambassador Claude G. Bowers gracefully said in making that dedication, the memorial to Irving by the Spanish government will give the more pleasure in this country since here familiarity with the story of the Alhambra is a legacy of almost every schoolchild.

The work of James Bryce, of Paul Claudel, and of other scarcely less famous literary envoys have familiarized Washington with the delightful combination which results when an accomplished diplomat is also an accomplished man of letters. It is a combination in which our contribution in foreign capitals has been far from negligible. In the case of Washington Irving the triumph was the greater since his pen first depicted the beauty of old Spain not merely for his fellow-countrymen but for the educated world as well.

Pension Curtailments.

The special boards which have been engaged in reviewing the claims of World War veterans have made preliminary disallowance of those claims in 57 per cent of the 51,213 cases investigated. The boards of review, composed chiefly of war veterans, received instructions to resolve all reasonable doubts in favor of claimants. Under the circumstances, the record of rejections is conclusive evidence of the widespread character of the abuses that have developed in awarding pensions to "presumptively" war disabled veterans. In the Burlington, Vt., area over 75 per cent of the claims have been disallowed, and in New York State, 64 per cent of the approximately 4,000 cases reviewed were rejected.

While this record appears to justify the action taken in removing from the pension rolls men whose disabilities are not service connected, it also points a moral for Congress to heed. Nearly 30,000 disabled men have been deprived of pensions which, it appears, ought not to have been claimed. Lax laws and careless administration of the pension act are primarily to blame both for the imposition practiced upon the taxpayers of the country and the disillusionment now faced by those disqualified.

Many of the men who have been disqualified naturally nourish a feeling of bitterness against a government which gave lavishly in the years of prosperity and is taking away largess when times are hard. Their sense of injury will not be assuaged by explaining to them that a reform of the pension system was necessary to relieve the Federal Government of the growing incubus of an unsound and intolerably expensive system which never should have been approved.

A London Fog.

As 1933 was emerging from the chrysalis, London newspapers boasted: "Five Hours of Sunshine Today!" And all through its life, until the last 10 days, 1933 was one of climatic geniality for the gray old metropolis. Only once in this century have Londoners been able so often to stroll in Hyde Park, to ride in Rotten Row, to watch the pigeons from the benches in Trafalgar Square, and to dawdle through St. James' Park. But, going out, the year took a sardonic fling at Fleet street. New Year's eve put on what our Cockney cousins call "a proper pea-souper."

Six persons died in accidents during the blanketing fog, and scores were injured. Airplanes neither left nor arrived at Croydon. Steamers, tooting hoarsely along the Thames, finally dropped anchor and gave up trying to move. Acetylene flares blazed at London street crossings. Street cars crawled along, preceded by their conductors on foot and carrying flares. Women in evening gowns deserted their "motors" and crept home by flashlight. Police called on volunteers to help with the traffic.

Stodgy newspapers, devoted to reporting the more material troubles, do not record how many pretty young girls bumped into how many handsome young men; nor how many romances bloomed in the "pea-souper." But, as a gracious and kindly Southern maiden lady once said, a little bit wistfully, "I love London. Anything can happen in a London fog."

Slighting The District.

A total of $35,436,500 has been requested of the Public Works Administration for various projects in the District of Columbia. That organization has responded by allowing Washington $1,759,500 for sewer improvements. Its entire appropriation of $3,300,000,000 has been allocated with almost complete disregard for the requests and needs of the District.

It is estimated that approximately $800,000,000 of the total has been lent or granted to local governments. This money is being spent for water works, bridges, street improvements, sewers, power plants, hospitals, public buildings, schools, filter plants, jails, &c. An impressive list of District projects of this type was submitted to the PWA months ago, along with requests for aid, but only the one small allotment has been granted. It is well below the average obtained by communities of comparable size.

On several occasions Secretary Ickes urged States and municipalities to take advantage of Uncle Sam's offer to finance local public works. The PWA was anxious to allocate its funds as speedily as was compatible with utility and efficiency, in order to create jobs and stimulate industry. Yet District projects urgently needed by the community, and on which work could begin immediately, have been completely ignored.

Spokesmen for the PWA explain this situation by the fact that large sums have been set aside for Federal projects and that part of such funds are being spent in Washington. That explanation, of course, is beside the point. Part of the $800,000,000 to be distributed among local governments is in the nature of outright gifts. In some cases the PWA lends local governments 70 per cent of the money necessary to complete a project, and then grants the remaining 30 per cent as a Federal contribution. In other cases 30 per cent grants are made by the PWA and the local agency provides the remainder of the cost from its own revenues. Under this arrangement a good deal more than 30 per cent of the fund available for local projects will be distributed in the form of gifts. But Washington is denied both loans and gratuities.

Refusal of the PWA to grant the District a fair share of its fund must be considered, therefore, as an intentional act of discrimination against local taxpayers. Why should the Government make an outright gift of $25,000,000 to New York, toward the total cost of constructing a bridge and a tunnel, and deny comparable benefit to the taxpayers of Washington?

A number of very substantial and necessary projects are on the list submitted to the PWA with recommendations from the District Commissioners. They include schools and playgrounds, $3,420,000; two units of the Municipal Center, $9,600,000; a District jail, $1,200,000; tuberculosis hospital facilities, $2,000,000; a National Guard Armory, $2,550,000; branch libraries, $800,000; a modern morgue, $105,000; additions to Gallinger Hospital, $1,000,000; a Michigan Avenue Viaduct, $400,000; reclamation of Anacostia flat, $360,000; a sewage disposal plant recently estimated to cost $8,000,000, and a number of minor projects.

Many of these improvements must in any case be carried out within the next few years. It is astounding that the Government should allocate $3,300,000,000 for public works without granting aid for more of Washington's needs.

An Unbiased Proposal.

Approaching the problem of Philippine independence from an unbiased and realistic viewpoint, the Foreign Policy Association and the World Peace Foundation have made a joint and significant contribution to the discussion of this issue. We are accustomed to hearing from certain American agricultural interests unreasoning demands for immediate termination of free trade with the Philippines. And the Filipinos have been just as emphatic in demanding immediate and untrammeled independence, with little consideration for the ramifying economic and political consequences of such a move. The note sounded by the experts who investigated this dilemma for the Foreign Policy Association is far removed from the prejudiced views on either side. It commands serious attention.

Defects in the Hawes-Cutting act, as noted in this study, raise doubt as to whether it would give the Philippines stability along with independence. For example, the act calls for retention by the United States of naval bases in the Philippines. The committee fears that a neutralization agreement for the islands might be impossible with this provision in effect.

Obviously, if any permanent solution of the Philippine issue is to be worked out Congress will have to view the problem more objectively, and the Filipinos must face the issue of readjusting their economic system. So long as selfish interests on either side of the Pacific shape our mutual relations they are certain to be unsatisfactory. Even though some of the conclusions reached by the Foreign Policy Association's committee seem a little vague, they serve the useful and constructive purpose of directing attention to the actual problems of independence and away from the selfish motives that have dominated past discussion of the issue.

The Philippine report is a result of a new technique adopted by the Foreign Policy Association. In addition to its helpful factual reports on international problems, the association is now sponsoring a series of independent studies on current issues, by committees composed of well-known authorities. These groups will give the public the benefit of conclusions and recommendations as well as facts. The idea is thoroughly in accord with democratic traditions and if carefully carried out may prove decidedly helpful in formulating intelligent public opinion in the vital field of international relations.

The First Cabinet Change.

There was no element of surprise in either the resignation of Secretary Woodin or in the designation by President Roosevelt of Henry Morgenthau, jr., as his successor. Out of a deep sense of personal loyalty, reflected in the warm tones of correspondence that passed between the President and himself, Mr. Woodin had remained in the Cabinet against his desires and the advice of his doctors. His illness had made it impossible for him to stamp his character upon the policies of the department, but he was an exemplar of wishful desire to serve his friend and the country faithfully.

Between the President and his new Secretary there is also a deep bond of friendship, going back many years to the day, when as neighbors, they swapped information upon the treatment of diseased trees. Twice previously Mr. Roosevelt had entrusted Mr. Morgenthau with responsible positions and both times his faith in his abilities had been justified. The new assignment is more difficult than either of those which preceded and Mr. Morgenthau is less experienced for it. He no doubt recognizes the magnitude of his task and the grave consequences which wait upon his decisions. He takes command at the Treasury with universal good wishes for a tenure on which the country will be able to look back with gratification.

Penalizing The Little Man.

Gen. Johnson has ordered the suspension of the proposed schedules of bankers' service charges and has extended the time for filing acceptable rules of fair practice.

Attention has been concentrated upon the proposals submitted by the New York City banks, although banks in other cities have been preparing to establish similar charging systems in accordance with suggestions embodied in a so-called master code. Due to a misunderstanding, the banks apparently believed that they were following officially prescribed methods for ascertaining the cost of services rendered and fixing charges. The premature publication of the proposed New York code has served a useful purpose, therefore, in apprising the general public of the contemplated plan and giving depositors and bankers, too, an opportunity to voice their objections.

In the case of New York City, the high service charges contemplated undoubtedly would have led thousands of small depositors to join the ranks of those who already find checking accounts too expensive to maintain, because of the relatively large balances required. Elsewhere the consequences would have been much the same, allowing for differences in the amount of the charges and in the rules regarding maintenance of balances.

The indirect costs of thus discouraging the use of small deposits should be considered most carefully before the banks decide upon a new system of charges. The United States has long prided itself upon its possession of a highly developed system of check payments which economizes the use of cash and provides for safe and expeditious transfers of funds. In large cities, the checking account is especially valuable because of the loss of time and energy and the actual danger involved in transferring sums of money from hand to hand. When wages and salaries have to be paid in cash, or converted into cash immediately by the recipients, danger from robberies and holdups is increased, to say nothing of the fact that much larger sums of money have to be provided by the banks to meet such payments.

Banks can not be expected, of course, to provide expensive services without adequate return for their outlays, but it seems shortsighted to consider only the direct costs of the services rendered and to try to establish a covering scale of charges that is excessive in relation to the value of the service to many individuals. In the long run, the banks might find that they would obtain larger returns indirectly by encouraging more extensive use of the check, instead of forcing people to revert to primitive methods of effecting payments.

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications should be signed with the writer's name. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters should be limited to 300 words.

From a Jobless Veteran.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article appearing in your paper of Sunday, December 17, on page 14, under heading of "Veterans' Relief Battle in Congress Declared Menace to U. S. Budget," by Lawrence F. Schmeckebier, is not to go unchallenged. It is carefully noted by this writer, who happens to be a front line World War veteran, and in referring to the paragraph which quotes "To offset this, it must be remembered that the Public Works Administration and other emergency job-creating activities give special preference to unemployed veterans, for whom a special division of the Federal reemployment service has been organized."

With actual experience and commenting on the above quotation, I want to say and emphasize that this, from my experience, is false in its entirety. How much longer the people are going to stand for this kind of propaganda is already foreseen.

I have spent the past six months in Washington in an honest effort to secure a position in the Public Works Administration or one of the many Governmental establishments, sleeping at nights in an old Nash car of the twenty-eighth vintage, parked within a stone's throw of the White House and selling books in the spare moments that I have, to try and support my wife and three children and provide me with a subsistence, while coaxing and begging Mr. E. K. Burlew, assistant director to Secretary of the Interior Ickes, and the many other assistant directors for a position. I have pleaded second after minute, minutes after hours, hours after days, days after weeks and even weeks after months and have seen many other veterans doing the same thing, only to be finally ignored and given no consideration.

With 20 years' business, banking and legal training and losing the disability allowance of $18 per month that I was getting and refused any benefits for a war-time disability which I have, but which the Veterans' Administration in its legal and technical boards have refused to consider after my former company officers and doctors have attested to the fact that my disabilities are the result of my war-time service out on the front lines, what ingratitude, because, as I suppose, I wore a uniform and helped to defend a country and Nation that during my school days I was taught to love and even if necessary to give my life for when it was attacked by an enemy. And after proving and measuring up to these supposedly high motives and principles and risking my own life to save that of my captain by attacking and overpowering one who attempted to fill him full of lead at the point of a pistol, I am told no, we have no place for you.

In all the 39 years of my life never have I been forced to undergo and endure a Christmas like just passed, with no fuel in the house, and myself and family hardly anything to eat; turned down and ignored for a position which I am qualified for, by a Government that I have fought for and defended, and then to pick up and read an article in a paper that would have you believe this supposedly grateful Government is giving preference and consideration to its patriotic defenders, the veterans.

FRANKLIN W. TRAGESSER.
Columbia, Pa.

Mr. Bryan and Silver

To the Editor of The Post— Sir: Do any of you remember back when they used to say, "Vote for Taft now, you can vote for Bryan any old time." You see, Bryan had a good idea but the politicians of his time did not know enough to realize that a silver fox hide was the only hide that gold could be strained through and meet the required results. JOHN GERRY.

He Urges Adherence to "The Golden Rule."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let him who is so quick to scorn or ridicule any one of his fellow creatures consider well what one man has learned over a period of years of "knocking" about the world in low as well as high places.

First and for all time the heart of man is pure and good, and to every person's heart there is a "key." Possess that key and his or her heart will open to you, whoever, whatever or wherever you are. My experience in "panhandling" has taught me that every person is charitable and unselfish, according to the person and circumstances involved. Charity is dressed in as many fads, fancies and fashions as there are time and people. Every man can be approached by the right person, be that person rich man, poor man, beggar man or thief. No man is wholly a coward, and, by the same token, no man is all hero. Those so-called "he men" are usually the rankest kind of moral cowards. That person who is so lucky in games of chance; hear him "curse the luck" in a thousand incidents where and when you, who are not lucky in games of chance, are lucky. You who are strong in some things and weak in others, how dare you damn any man, woman or child whosoever!

You, who think you stand upon your own feet, that you are independent and exclusive, that you belong to some and not to others, and that you are not your brother's keeper; I advise you to explore that limited world in which you live, move and have your being. I have learned that there is nothing in or of life that merits or deserves my scorn, condemnation or ridicule. All things have their place in the human race. And all is pure and good when understood.

I have found by first-hand observation that it is always the ignorant, no matter how much schooling or higher education he has had, who is first to down, scorn, condemn and ridicule others. Every man is intelligent in his proper sphere and the wisest of professors is very ignorant out of his proper place.

MARCUS H. PETERSEN.

Disapproving Government Ownership of Public Utilities.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Among recent communications published in your journal, the author of one letter freely advocated Government ownership of public utilities. I do not indorse his views, and when the issue is before the people for settlement, I will be aligned with those opposing the Government entering the realm of business. However, I concur in the suggestion that newspapers poll the people for their verdict. An early vote would hasten the return of prosperity. Already several cities in far-separated States have registered their decision.

Over the utilities a threat exists that doesn't seem justified. Public utilities in this country, exclusive of steam railroads, are valued at approximately $28,000,000,000. More than 10,000,000 citizens have their money invested in these industries. Twenty years ago, the electric power and light companies contributed about five and one-half cents out of each dollar of revenue to the support of the Government. This year (1933) close to fourteen cents out of each revenue dollar will go to Federal, State and local governments. Also, since 1913, rates have been reduced on an average of 36 per cent. Last year nearly three quarters of a billion dollars were paid in taxes by the regulated public utilities of this country. Is there to be a change in the plan of our Government?

Among us there has arisen a group of men advancing a new philosophy; should their ideas prevail, a social order would be introduced, very different from the order existing now, under which our country has grown and become a world power. The plan they seem to offer may destroy initiative and take from us the right to own property and other personal liberties that should be held sacred. Any plan or system that makes negative individual effort and hampers the desire that spurs to accomplishment would be a disaster and a far step from our cherished traditions and democratic principles.

Would it appear irrelative should I intimate that those who have read Diogenes' request of Alexander, "Please do not screen the sunlight from me," may not have grasped all of its significance?

WALTER I. PRIEST.
Bluemont, Va.

There Is No Way to Divide the Land if None But Land Owners Vote

By Robert Quillen

All of America's visible wealth was a gift of nature. When the first men came to this land, it "belonged" to nobody but its Creator. The railroads, bridges, skyscrapers and machines were made of stone and clay and lumber and ores that were part of the land's natural resources.

Under the rules of free competition—every man for himself and laws to benefit the winner—relatively few men and women now own the greater part of the Nation's wealth. They or their forbears were shrewder, luckier or more ambitious than the majority.

But these few who own the country can not make it fruitful. They would be helpless, even to feed themselves and make their clothes, if others refused to work for them.

Working for them affords a career for the many. It may be true that any man may work his way to the top, but the big jobs are few. The ninety and nine must work for a boss or dig a poor living from the soil for the sake of independence.

This condition is not new. It was old when the pyramids were built.

But the ninety and nine are beginning to ask a question and to search for an answer.

Disillusioned and impoverished by the greed and knavery and incompetence of the dominant few, they are asking one another: "Is it the first business of machinery to support those who make it work or to support those who acquire it by inheritance?"

A few great fortunes, increasing now by their own momentum and in the nature of things absorbing more property as their increase is invested, will in time possess the Nation.

The inevitable end is monopoly, with every man's living at the mercy of an unseen boss.

Perhaps the rules that permit it were fair in the beginning, but you can't compete with a maker of tin cups if he owns all of the tin.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

IT IS hard to contemplate this session of Congress without feeling sad over the ending of the beautiful friendship that existed between Mr. Roosevelt and Huey Long. It is all right for the others—senators and members of the House—to be issuing amicable statements and giving the impression that the session will be one grand love-feast. But there is a discord that one senses, an off-note somewhere over there in the corner that you don't place at first, but feel nevertheless.

BARGERON.

It's the feeling between Huey and Mr. Roosevelt, that's what it is, a sour note from an otherwise very harmonious harp.

Frankly, it touches me, makes me feel down at the mouth, when everybody else seems so happy.

* * * *

Of course, it is none of my business and I really shouldn't let it affect me at all. But it does. I just hate to see such beautiful friendships broken up. And how did it come about? Some little misunderstanding that a simple explanation could fix up, I'll bet.

Out there at Chicago no one was tootin' a louder horn for Mr. Roosevelt than Huey, no one sang more lustily in his praise. There were some of us at the time who thought Huey would later prove a great embarrassment and that Mr. Roosevelt would have to shake him.

This is not though, what has happened. Huey never became an embarrassment at all. I realized he never would after his clownish acts just outside Mr. Roosevelt's room in the Mayflower Hotel when Mr. Roosevelt came through here just after the election, en route to Warm Springs. My thought then was that Huey's conduct was outrageous, but the Roosevelt party didn't think so. Instead, they laughed at Huey; thought he was the funniest thing in the world.

* * * *

Subsequently, Huey was warmly received at Warm Springs. So it wasn't his clownishness that caused the break. Really, it is hard to understand just what it was.

* * * *

It couldn't have been a split over policies. Huey made a lot of noise at the emergency session, but the only time he really stood in Mr. Roosevelt's way was over the banking bill, the bill giving the President emergency powers over the banks. Huey insisted that under the bill's provisions the small State banks would be ruined. Later, everybody seemed to agree that Huey was right and the bill's provisions were changed.

This is the only time that I can recall that Huey and Mr. Roosevelt really locked horns, if this incident could be described that way.

* * * *

Yet as soon as the session adjourned the word went out in the Administration to put the screws on Huey. And they have been applied. They are hurting Huey, too. The steam is not coming from his nostrils half as strong as it was. One gets the impression, in fact, that Huey is very much subdued.

But why was it necessary to subdue him? There seems to be no great conflict in his views and the way the Administration is moving.

Oh, there was a tendency on Huey's part to get in on everything, that is to say, to make so much noise about everything that was done on the Hill that the country would get the impression that it was a joint Huey-Roosevelt program that was being enacted. That seems to have been his only purpose in threatening and blustering as he did. It must have been what got him in bad. Maybe Mr. Roosevelt just didn't want to share the authorship of the program with him.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Coventry Patmore.

Sometimes a short poem, remembered in a time when it is entirely out of harmony with what might be called the Spirit of the Age, gains rather than loses in intensity. If standards in economic, financial, political, moral, spiritual life seem to many people to be shifting and uncertain, it is perhaps well occasionally to recall a time in the not distant past when standards and ideals seemed firmer and clearer than they are now.

Thus a few lines from Coventry Patmore, a Victorian poet, while they would be resented by some people, seem in our restless age stronger even than when they were written. Their author was a man of convictions, who knew what he believed. I quote from memory:

Ah, wasteful woman, she who may
On her sweet self set her own price,
Knowing he can not choose but pay,
How has she cheapened Paradise;
How given for naught her precious gift,
How spoiled the bread and spilt the wine,
Which, spent with due, respective thrift,
Had made beasts men, and men divine.

Mr. Roosevelt is considering adopting a "controlled" dollar. The whole trouble is that dollars are already so thoroughly under control those who need them most can not get them.

New Jewelry To Be Smart Must Be Big Lavish Jeweled Necklaces Come Apart Into Bracelets.

Sports jewelry is large and important. Gold and silver are both smart, and the dull finish looks newer than the very shiny. Bracelets are massive in effect, but light in weight. Many of them have a flat surface at the top for a monogram. Interesting chain or novelty metal bead necklaces are back in style and relieve the severity of a high neckline. Clips, of course, play a big role, and usually match some other piece of jewelry, such as a bracelet. Big pins are much worn. There are many variations of the bar pin in twisted wire and in metal and composition combinations. They are worn in scarfs and at the closing of the neck. If your dress is fastened with metal or composition buttons, match your bracelets and pins to them as it gives a smart ensemble.

Clear crystal or composition is very popular. The colors are lovely. Charming omber effects are achieved in sets of plain bracelets, each one in a different shade. These are plain round bracelets, some wide, some narrow, some carved. All the jewelry manufacturers making this type of bracelet show two or more types of pins, clips and earrings to match. There will be many three-quarter or short-sleeved dresses for spring and these look much smarter with bracelets.

Precious and exotic woods are being used for sports jewelry; tulip wood, rose wood, zebra wood, cocobola, mahogany, olive, pear, and so on down a large list. They are cut to show the grain to its best advantage, and they are very beautiful.

Stylized and realistic animals are being displayed in pins and clips. They are made of wood composition, or metal combined with these. Some combine mesh with solid metal. A decorative and amusing pin is called "Bar Fly." It is clear composition with raised wings, and bright jeweled eyes.

Pearl Sets Smart.

There are all manner of new bead necklaces with matching bracelets. Large oval beads in clear colors form long necklaces with triple strand braclets. Silver beads woven into a pattern and threaded with velvet ribbon make flattering collars and cuffs. Braided or pleated sets made of velvet or grosgrain ribbon edged with metal beads are also very effective. Turquoise colored beads in triple strands caught with a dull gold clasp about the depth of a V-neck and ending in a fringe of beads is matched by bracelets, and is a smart color contrast on black or brown. Pearls, too, are treated in this same manner. Every well-filled jewel box should have one or more sets of pearl jewelry because it is smart, becoming and always in good taste. For afternoon or evening wear one of the most flattering necklaces is of woven seed pearls, simulated of course, fitting closely about the neck and finished with a flat woven pearl bow.

For day wear, earrings are small and neat. The button type is very popular, but newer is the small clip which Worth brought out in Paris. These are made of gold, silver or colored enamel. For evening they are paved with rhinestone. They are often carved to match composition bracelets and clips, and may be either clear or opaque.

Big Rings Popular.

Big rings are one of the best sellers, and are increasingly popular. For daytime wear they are carved from a solid piece of composition or semiprecious stone. There is one called the "Crystal Gazer's" ring, because the top is a crystal ball. Clear colors and black are the most striking.

For evening, jewelry has gone to our heads. There is a tremendous run on hair ornaments. The elaborate and important tiara made in the grand manner of court jewels is very elegant. There are jeweled diadems in Russian style. Fabrics come into this picture in silver or gold lame combined with brilliant velvet. Pearls, too, play a big role, in graduated size, set on a bandeau. Huge, clear bubbles in jewel colors crown many heads. The more conservative wear a flat bandeau of rhinestones or a pair of jeweled clips or combs. Tiny real flowers are being worn by smart women in the back of their hair, a gardenia or a lady-slipper orchid. Little touquets of field flowers attached to a comb are charming, and bandeaux or artificial flowers are beginning to be worn. Combs and clips begin the jewel rush and are now a trifle overshadowed by tiaras.

The magician's wand is possible for all of us now that clever designers have made jewelry that can change its spots, so to speak. Pins can be taken apart to become a pair of clips. Long, lavish jeweled necklaces can be taken apart to form four bracelets and a pin. Clip earrings can be worn in the ears or on a dress.

One store is showing a pair of large jewelled clips to match a buckle for the belt and a very pretty idea it is. If you are the exotic type you will have plenty of choice in long earrings. If you show your ears the neat earring in the form of a jewelled clip or the kind that outlines the ear is charming.

There is wide latitude in the choice of necklaces. Pearls are made more formal with jewelled ornaments on each side which match the clasps of the bracelets. Chockers of fine rhinestones, long necklaces with large pendants, semiprecious stone pendants set in gold on gold chains, and jewel colored clear beads with rhinestones are being worn.

Jewelled Pins Important.

Large jewelled pins are very important for evening wear. They are worn on the shoulder, at a dramatic spot in the decolletage, in the belt in lieu of a buckle, to pin on flowers and to hold a scarf or drapery in place. The sheath pin in two sections showing a bit of the dress material in the center is new this winter and is also worn on evening hats.

With some of the very shiny lames woven with gold, gold jewelry is smarter than the added glitter of rhinestones, and tiaras in Greek key design, curled feather shapes or gold leaves are very lovely.

Jewelry is essential to the return of elegance, and is not only glamorous, but is used in many instances to complete details and give added distinction.

Child Weaves Musical Spell In New York

Father, Bowing to Public Acclaim, Extends Stay of Ruth Slenczynski.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Fate has sent you a child prodigy, an 8-year-old pianist such as Ruth Slenczynski, who has astounded New York in recent weeks. . . .

She has been presented to the public and established as one of the inexplicable wonders of the musical world after only two public appearances. . . .

What then?

That's the problem, according to Josef Slenczynski, that is giving him gray hairs. Three weeks ago he had a definite program for Ruth; now it is perhaps less definite.

Popularity Upsets Plans.

He intended that his sturdy little daughter should play twice more, in California, and then return to his wife and two younger daughters in Paris for at least three years of undisturbed study.

That program already has been stretched to include concerts in Baltimore and Washington. There is a projected appearance with orchestra in prospect for New York.

"But I don't know," said the perplexed father. "One thing is certain; she will not play much more in public for a long while."

Whereupon Ruth, swinging her legs from the piano chair, asks with a grin:

"Where were doughnuts first made?"

Nobody knew.

"In grease!" explained Ruth and returned to the role of listener. Some one had sent her a book of riddles for a present.

An Eye for the Future.

"You see," continued Mr. Slenczynski, "I won't have Ruth made a drudge. You can see she is healthy and eager to play. I want to keep her so."

At which point Ruth decided she would like to play again the "Winter Wind" etude of Chopin's that electrified her first New York audience.

"It's the Battle of Bunker Hill," she declared seriously. "The first slow part is Washington building his 'protections,' you see. And then there is the battle."

Cocktail Gown Comes Off To Reveal Formal Frock

Sari Maritza's favorite cocktail gown is a very tricky affair. Untie the small bow in the front and off come the sleeves and the back, revealing a gown of more formal accent.

This costume is of dark green satin. The elbow-length sleeves of the very original jacket are pointed at the shoulders. The gown itself has a high cowl neckline in front and quite a low decollete in back, and is fashioned along molded lines.

Glorifier of the gadget is Elsa Schiaparelli, the most original and imaginative dressmaker in Paris. This Italian woman, who creates costumes in the modern mood, receives inspirations for the ingenius gadgets that she uses in place of buttons from such varied subjects as the dollar sign, a horse's harness and a fat beetle crawling on the sidewalk.

Despite Full Slate, First Lady Will See Congress Open

Mrs. Roosevelt Plans to Be Present When Her Girlhood Friend, Mrs. Greenway, Takes Oath as Arizona's Representative.

The President's wife has started the New Year in a typically Eleanor Roosevelt fashion—a full engagement book and hundreds of interests that can't even be classified for the engagement book.

Her first problem, she told her first press conference of 1934 yesterday, is to arrange her schedule so that she can attend today's opening of Congress.

Her girlhood friend, Mrs. Isabella Greenway, is gonig to receive the oath of office as Representative from Arizona, and the First Lady is eager to be there.

If the President reads his address to Congress, Mrs. Roosevelt feels that even a full engagement book will not keep her from the Capitol Hill at that time.

Her holiday week has been a busy one, admitted the First Lady. A house full of grandchildren and young people, friends of her own children, has kept her pretty close to household duties.

But now the holiday season is over and the White House clearing of the young folks, Mrs. Roosevelt's attention has turned to her various extra-domestic interests.

For the New Year she predicts a slow return to normal times.

"There might be some ups and downs," she amended, "but on the whole I feel there will be peaceful progression toward prosperity."

Telling about the subsistence homestead project at Reedville, W. Va., Mrs. Roosevelt announced happily that the first 50 families would move into their model homes by the first of February.

"Although the houses are practically complete, it was thought best to wait until everything is perfect before families actually begin living there," she explained.

It was originally planned that the first 50 occupy their new homes on January 1.

Schiaparelli's Pert Frocks Enliven Capital Parties

Woman Who Once Lived in Washington Furnished Room Now Makes Gowns for Its Most Elegant Society Women.

Some dress designers get ideas from famous old paintings, from costumes worn by noted figures in history, and from ponderous volumes of literature. Schiaparelli is too much a child of the present to turn to the past for any of her inspirations. She gets ideas for her unusual trimmings from the harness of a dray horse, from the bobbins and weights on a fisherman's net, and from such commonplace things as safety pins and paper clips.

Silvery metal clips on a crushed raspberry crepe dress in a Connecticut avenue shop inform the fashion-wise woman that she is beholding a copy of a Schiaparelli model even before the proud saleswoman announces the name of the most ingenious couturiere in Paris. In this instance the harness-like clips are used to fasten a yoke which has large tucks radiating horizontally to the tips of the long sleeves. The sleeves are cut in one with the narrow yoke. Below the yoke the bodice is quite plain and joins the skirt at the waistline beneath a silver elastic belt. Four gored sections give the skirt front fullness. The back is flat and straight.

Red Polka Dots.

A copy of a Schiaparelli frock for street or sports wear is in a Q street shop. Novelty gray woolen makes the striking dress, which has a collar and beret of navy blue knit with red and white polka dots. The collar ends in a scarf which may be worn in an Ascot knot or tied in a butterfly bow.

The frock itself is one of those plain-looking things that are really very complicated. Small pockets are made in front just below the shoulders by the sides of a bib-like affair that also creates pockets at the hip line. Sleeves are long and straight. The skirt, with a seam down the center front, is rather full in back below a pinched-in waist. A narrow yoke dips to a point between the shoulder blades and fastens with three covered buttons. The color of this dress, a cold slate gray, and the material, which is closely woven in a blurred herringbone pattern, make it an ideal costume for the young person who knows that severity with just a bit of dash is an unfailing recipe for smartness.

As striped as a zebra is the bodice of a crepe jacket dress copied from a Schiaparelli original. The department store that has it says it is for cruise and resort wear. But when warm weather comes, this model will undoubtedly flaunt its brown and crushed rose stripes in Washington's fashionable luncheon places and on country club verandas. The hip-length bodice fastens in straightforward fashion with grooved brown bone buttons. An inverted pleat in the center front gives width to the slim, straight, crushed rose skirt. A narrow rose crepe belt at the normal waistline tempers the long-waisted effect of the hip-length bodice. The brown crepe jacket has tailored lapels, raglan sleeves, and fastens with one covered button.

Washington Women in Welfare Work

Patriotic fervor and the needs of the soldiers getting ready to go to France during the World War were responsible for the entrance of Mrs. Harry Roller into Social Welfare work. Her gravitation from that field to a distinct interest in Child Welfare can be definitely traced to the fact that as a young girl she was a school teacher and had an opportunity to observe at first hand the disadvantages under which some of the little ones labored.

Leaving her school-teaching position to get married, Mrs. Roller went to Virginia and was there at the outbreak of the war, doing welfare work for the soldiers and their families. She came back to Washington in 1918 and became interested first in the Jewish Foster Home and the health of children. She became a board member of the Jewish Social Service Agency, branched forth into all sorts of welfare work and has been an ardent worker for the Community Chest and in addition has found time to work for a food kitchen preparing food for needy families and to do Red Cross work. She feels that the case method is the only real way to handle social work problems.

"My interests are no longer specialized," she says. "By that I mean I am equally interested in every branch of welfare work. Child and adult welfare are of equal importance in the field of social work. Today in this particular period of economic stress the necessity for real welfare work by trained social workers grows more and more apparent. I am positive that the only method of readjustment for the unemployed, or for other causes destitute families is through the careful study and skilled advice of the trained social worker."

Marion Talley Happy Over "Comeback" Operatic Triumph

Singer Who Quit to Go Back to Farm Rejoices on Return.

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP).—A bottle of milk and a ham sandwich—that's what Marion Talley longed for most after scoring a "comeback" triumph in opera with Chicago's Grand Opera Company in the Civic Opera House.

The youthful star, whose soprano voice captured the hearts of New Yorkers at the Metropolitan seven years ago when she was but 19, as Gilda in "Rigoletto," repeated her success and her local audience found her a better artist than in the days of old.

But to get back to the sandwich and the milk. She got them both just as soon as Chicago's opera lovers, who taxed the capacity of the spacious opera house to overflowing, got their fill of curtain calls and throngs of admirers backstage finished with personal congratulations—and requests for autographs.

While all this was "music" to her ears, it was left to Paul Longone, general manager of the Grand Opera Company, to make her new year supremely happy. He handed her a contract calling for another appearance as Gilda some time between January 10 and 16.

"I'm so happy I could almost cry," said the girl—and she almost did.

It was four years ago at the peak of her success, after completing a three year's contract with the Metropolitan Company, that she unexpectedly announced her retirement to a 1,600-acre Kansas farm.

And she kept her word. But local critics today were of the opinion that her duties as a lady farmer in her native State did not cause her to neglect her voice.

Today, Miss Talley, who confessed afterwards that she was more than worried over a cold that bothered her considerably beforehand, said she would leave for the East—she'd rather not say just where.

"But I love Chicago," she said, "and I will be back soon."

For Gay Revels—the Bateau Frock

In Schiaparelli's hands of genius the omnipresent bateau neckline becomes a thing of fresh beauty and interest. Whenever this designer is not distinctly original, she translates another's ideas into her own terms so that they seem to be her own. In this brocaded silver lame gown she has combined a low back with the front bateau line.

Child of a Savant, She Is The Rebel of Dress Design

The Now Famous Couturiere Spent Several Years of Obscurity in New York and Washington Before Paris Carried Her to Quick Triumph.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

A dark, full-lipped Italian woman sat by her little girl's bed in a dingy Paris flat six years ago and made herself a black and white sweater while she watched over the sleeping child. The woman was Elsa Schiaparelli. The sweater was the beginning of one of the most important dressmaking houses in Paris. This is probably the only instance in history whereby a woman climbed from poverty and obscurity to wealth and fame on a pair of knitting needles.

No one was more surprised than Mme. Schiaparelli herself when her sweater led to such imposing consequences as a school in Switzerland for the little girl, Marise, and elaborate Paris and London dressmaking establishments for Marise's mother. Her one idea as she began her knitting was, that since sweaters were all the rage in Paris, she would like to have one. She chose the striking black and white combination because it reminded her of her native Rome. This marked the debut of these colors in the sportswear world.

The Italian woman's Parisian friends took one look at the unusual sweater and then begged for one like it. After she had spent two months making sweaters at break-neck speed, Schiaparelli tried designing sports clothes. These were so well received that within two years she took her courage and scissors in both hands and moved from the dingy flat to an attic in the Rue de la Paix, where she hung out her official sign, also in black and white. The sign is still there, but today Schiaparelli occupies the entire building and, with the help of 400 employes, produces between seven and eight thousand garments a year; garments that are so young and bold and dashing that they drive the other designers to despair.

They Read Sanskirt.

Her relatives in Italy have assumed a martyr-like attitude toward their Elsa's success. Dressmaking doesn't seem a very important business to archeologist cousins who poke around in musty tombs and spend leisure hours reading Sanskirt. They had hoped for bigger and better things than black and white sweaters, metal clips, and amusing buttons from the daughter of a professor of Oriental lore at the University of Rome.

But Elsa was determined to have nothing to do with Oriental lore. She plainly showed her feeling in this matter by running away when she was 6 years old. When she was found a few days later she was blithely leading a parade. Summers at the quiet Italian lakes and winters in a school run by a conventional Englishwoman tamed her to the point where, at 15, she wrote a poem instead of running away. Her father, no less upset than when he had found her prancing along in front of a parade, refused to read the verse when it was published. The next time she showed signs of yielding to the lyric muse she was promptly shipped off to a Swiss convent. To this day she loathes mountains.

Two years later, when she was 17, she was sent to England. After a few months she escaped from the schoolroom by marrying a native of Poland. This method of escape was no more successful than running away from home or embarking on flight in poesy.

New York Days.

Elsa and her husband came to New York immediately after their marriage and within two years the bride was wondering how she could return to the other side of the Atlantic, leaving the Polish gentleman behind. It took her five years to accomplish this. Those five years were taken up by moving from poorly furnished rooms in Ninth street, New York, to similarly sordid rooms in Washington and Florida; the birth of Marise, part time jobs in importing houses, and extra work in Eastern movie studios. Mme. Schiaparelli also managed to make a little extra money by doing translations. After five years of this existence she escaped to France with Marise. Then came the episode of the sweater with its amazing consequences.

This Italian couturiere is to dressmaking what Moussorgski is to music. Just as the Russian composer declares that he hates beauty and then proceeds to write exquisitely beautiful music, so does Schiaparelli claim that she has no intention of making women lovely and then proceeds to give them a crisp loveliness in spite of herself.

Hailed by the dressmaking world as a "genius" and "the esthete of the machine," she bases the lines of her creations on the hard, bony structure rather than on the undulating curves of the body. She has the modern's love of simplicity and even her most fantastic gadgets strike a starkly simple note.

China For Collars.

The most famous of these gadgets are used in lieu of buttons and are made of everything under the sun from aluminum and china to celluloid and metal. She has even used china for collars.

Most of the ideas for these ingenious whimsies as well as the clothes themselves come to her while she is bowling along in her motor car. And Schiaparelli is in her motor car a great deal of the time. She loves to go places. Where does not matter so much, so long as she is able to gratify her Italian craving for color, crowds and action.

She loves heat, water, modern furniture, plain food and expanses of white. Her home has startling white walls, while her atelier is done in an off-white shade. Americans feel at home in that atelier because it is furnished in a style that is decidedly "modern Manhattan." Americans also feel at home in Schiaparelli clothes because of their distinctly modern silhouette and their un-European flavor—a strange blend of skyscrapers, country clubs, cocktails and saxophones.

Schiaparelli is a creature of contradictions. When she lived in New York she furnished her little flat with shabby European furniture. Now that she is in Paris she has turned to typical New York decorative schemes. When she visits the Irish linen and Scotch tweed manufacturers she asks to see the mistakes that have been made on the looms rather than the successes. In these discarded bits of cloth she often sees more possibilities than in the perfect product. It is these contradictions that make Elsa Schiaparelli, the woman, as interesting as the clothes she designs.

Bathe in Salt Water to Rest Tired Nerves

The Home Salt Bath, Like Sea Water, Is Great Beauty Aid.

If your nerves are crying out for a salt-water dip, yet fate holds no promise of a Southern seashore sojourn this winter, compromise. Get a box of ordinary table salt and use the family bath tub.

Beauticians are telling us now that there's nothing better for overcoming fatigue and inertia than the warm, home-made salt-water bath. It's a vital tonic for the physical and nervous weariness which follows overexertion; for that after-the-holidays "let down."

Fill the tub threequarters full of water about 70 degrees fahrenheit and dump therein the contents of a 1-pound box of any cooking or table salt. Step in and relax. Bathe the usual way. In leaving the tub, have a couple of handfuls of salt handy, for briskly massaging the arms and legs.

One can get approximately the same effect with a shower bath by first standing under the shower and then massaging the body with salt, and rinsing the salt away. The skin will glow; a sense of vital well-being will follow.

There is said to be a definite stimulation to the nerve endings by massaging salt on the skin, which is communicated throughout the entire body.

Such a "dip" may prove a bit trying to the person with dry or very delicate skin, so it it well to experiment with a small quantity of salt used for the first of such baths. However, a thorough rinsing, followed by an olive oil rub, the oil administered very sparingly with the palms of the hands, should take care of even the most sensitive skin.

If the salt-water bath is taken for relaxation, better not be too energetic in the matter of towling. A better expedient is to possess oneself of one of the large after-bath dressing gowns or beach robes made of heavy toweling; and wrap it about one for warmth and moisture absorption when leaving the tub.

A Sailing Vessel Inspires a Gown

Schiaparelli is an extremist. Her newest gowns have all their fullness pushed forward in the "stormy weather" silhouette, or drawn to the back in dynamic lines that give the effect of a ship in full sail. Very stiff and heavy satin is usually used for these "ship" dresses. Baby-blue is the color of the gown illustrated.

Here's a Lotion That Rules the Unruly Waves

With Its Aid Hair May Be Made to Fit the Head's Contours.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A lotion that rules the waves! Straight hair which won't yield to a single curl, or a coiffure which is a mass of fly by the wind ringlets may both be helped straightway by an application of this specially prepared wave fluid.

Hair should never be worn in such a manner that it gives a distorted appearance to the shape of the head. It should be trained to fit the contour of the head as nearly as possible. One of the easiest and most effective methods is careful grooming with the hands or a comb after the hair has been liberally dampened with this wave lotion.

People who complain of unruly locks have only to try this to recognize immediate results.

A dull crepe background, vivid metal-work flowers make the new evening scarfs featured in an F street shop lovely beyond compare. A satin lining lends both body and warmth to the scarfs.

These are especially attractive when worn tied in a loose knot under a dark velvet evening wrap. They come in so many shades that there's surely one to match any and every formal frock in the city.

On these cold evenings when bare shoulders have scant protection with merely one wrap they serve a real good by fitting snugly around the throat and keeping out unwelcome and icy drafts.

The Florentine boxes featured in the stationery department of an F street store are not as simple as they appear to be. The highly polished hand-painted exterior looks much more like a metal composition than the smoothly and heavily coated lacquered wood that it is.

That there is actually more than meets the eye is proven when the top is removed and eight coasters come to sight.

Both the box and its contents can stand long wear and hard usage as they're waterproof of and alcohol-proof.

Inasmuch as the nicotine habit is taken for granted in most homes all the way from Grandma to the Sweet Sixteen any novel presentation of cigarette equipment interests us. Recently while exploring the interesting aisles of a local novelty shop we found a most exotic and alluring bronze Egyptian maiden standing erect and holding in uplifted hands a whole set of ash trays. In front of her, looking quite like an altar, rested a metal cigarette box.

It was a pleasure to see an ornament which had such useful qualities.

Granted that beer mugs were ordained for beer. But not granted they always contain it. Proof rests in the mug line-up in a large downtown store. One, two, three, there they are, large, Dutch looking mugs. Grasp the handle, flip the top, and no sudsy foam and beer aroma, but the scent of a whole bouquest issuing from a celaphane wrapped package of bath salts!

A manicure set which has more than its completeness to recommend it is proving to be one of the best sellers in a certain toilet goods section. Two shades of polish, cuticle remover, and nail white come neatly and compactly packed in a small bakelite case.

Its appearance is well suited to the loveliest dressing tables, and the fact that the contents are so well fitted in the case makes it a traveler's favorite. Many of us have, alack and alas, only too vivid memories of arriving at the end of the trip, opening our valise and finding our clothes drenched with nail polish. Such a casualty is hardly likely to occur if we travel with our complete set in this spill-proof bakelite case.

Little old-fashioned pictures are ridiculous in bright brand-new looking frames, but they're quite as delightful as they should be in the old-fashioned black and gold kind which were in vogue a half century ago. Sometimes one may make a lucky strike and find one of these in an antique or second-hand shop. But fortunately now they're more easily available in the stationery department of a local store.

According to the buyer, so many people came in and lamented the fact that appropriate frames for old photos weren't to be found that she wrote to a manufacturer and he in turn put this very kind on the market. They are black wood with an inner gold rim, small and oval.

With cold winds menacing us from without, and the furnace not helping us much from within, the easiest solution to a cold problem is to pile into bed with an electric heat pad. Pull the blankets up, snuggle down with icy feet wrapped around the heater, and presto, we're warmer and more comfortable than we've been all winter.

Mission Attendance 14,428.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Services at Cabell Street Union Mission last year were attended by 14,428 persons. There were 57 conversions, 3,125 rededications and 600 requests for prayer. T. H. Bryant, a World War veteran, is mission superintendent.

Remarkable Void.

By Katherine Smith.

I've seen amusement sparkle in
The heavy eyes of pain,
I've seen young laughter darkened with
The creeping reddened stain
Of sorrow, but the strangest sight
That I will ever see
Is great and fervent nothingness
Where one of these should be.

Vegetables Are Important on Winter Menus

Their Vitamins Build Up Vitality Weakened by Cold.

Vegetables are most needed in the diet in the winter time. Eat them raw as often as possible—in salad and other ways. The vitamins they contain are even more important in cold weather when one's vitality is at a lower ebb. Fresh vegetables are available any month of the year at low cost. A few well-balanced and economical menus follow. In each case they include a salad, containing at least one raw vegetable. You will find these menus both tempting and satisfying:

Winter Supper Menus.

Corned Beef Hash
Fresh Buttered Spinach
Hot Muffins
Molded Beet and Cabbage Salad
Apple Brown Betty

Red Cross Secretary Named.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Miss Emeline Thornhill, executive secretary of the Red Cross Society here for seven years, has resigned. Mrs. John Page Jones has been elected to succeed her.

Sweet Potatoes Are Good Baked With Raisins

Though Sugary in Flavor They Gain by Addition of Sweets.

Would you like a new way of fixing sweet potatoes? In spite of their own sweet flavor, sweet potatoes seem to taste even better when other sweet materials are added to them, as we realize when we eat candied sweets or sweet potatoes with marshmallows. The raisins for the following sweet potato dish, suggested by the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, are plumped a few minutes in hot water before being added to the mashed potato.

6 medium-sized sweet potatoes
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup raisins, plumped
½ cup top milk
1 tablespoon melted butter

Wash and cook the potatoes in their skins. When tender, scrape off the skins and mash the potatoes or force them through a potato ricer. Mix the milk, melted butter and salt with the potato and beat until light. Pour hot water over the raisins and let them stand for a few minutes until plumped; then drain, and add to the sweet potato. Grease a baking dish and pile the potato lightly into the dish. Put in a medium oven to heat through and brown lightly over the top. Serve from the dish in which cooked.

Graham Muffins.

1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons combination baking powder
4 tablespoons sugar
1¼ cups graham flour
1 egg, well beaten
1½ cups milk
1 tablespoon melted butter or other shortening

Sift flour once, measure, add salt, baking powder, and sugar, and sift again. Add Graham flour. Combine egg and milk and add to flour gradually. Add shortening, beating well. Bake in greased muffin pans in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Makes 18 muffins.

Lynchburg Free of Typhoid.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—After the best typhoid record in history in 1933, Lynchburg starts the new year without a single case of typhoid fever of record. Last year there were 16 cases and one death. The city went through 1933 without a single case of infantile paralysis.

What's in Fashion?

Luncheon and Bridge Linens Are Gay Spurs to Appetites

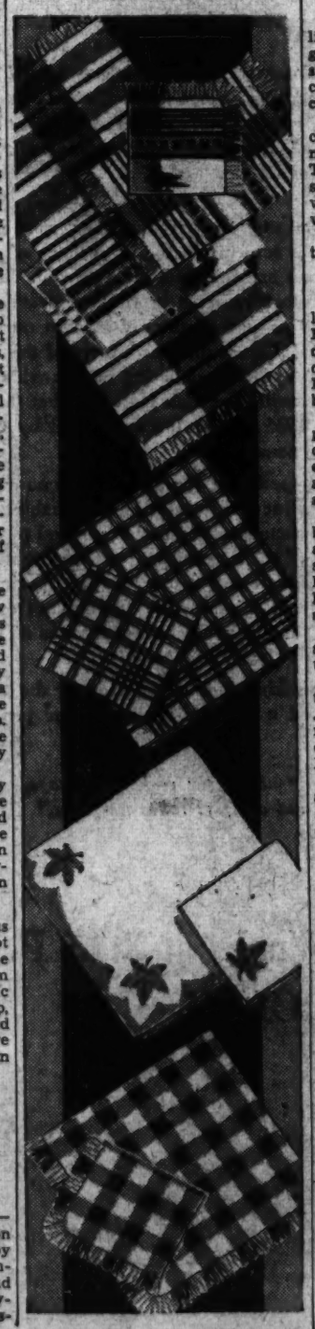
Directed by Amos Parrish

Linens of the types described are available in Washington in all the better class shops.

New York, Jan. 3.—Plaids, stripes, checks, bands, dots, appliques. In a gay way they are all conniving to pep up appetites—and then get you so interested looking at them that you almost forget to eat.

It's at informal luncheons and at after-bridge snacks that you see them. And in their colors and designs they are quite in the spirit of modern decoration.

Bridge sets are most colorful and gay. New coarsely woven materials display brilliant stripes in varied width and arrangements, often combined with an accentuating black line.



Fringed Sets.

Attractive, too, are the fringed linen sets in red-and-white or green-and-white checks. (One is shown at the bottom of the sketch column.) These come in sets of cloth and four napkins.

Linen with appliqued motifs in contrasting colors make some of the most modern looking bridge sets. That's because of their colorings, such combinations as beige linen with appliques of black, red and white being used.

An appliqued set is sketched next to the bottom.

Gay or Restrained.

Informal luncheon sets are following the same path of gay colors. But there are also very smart sets done in a more restrained style. And one of the most fashionable is ecru Italian linen adorned with hand embroidery.

You'll like this ecru background, particularly if you use colorful china, and you can have yours in either a cloth and eight napkins or a doily set with long scarf, eight square napkins and oblong doilies.

For more colorful luncheons, beige linen with bold stripes of red-and-blue makes sets of cloth and six napkins. Then there are sets of long scarf and eight fringed napkins done in hand-woven or homespun or Mexican effects.

There are many attractive sets of the type shown just below this, too . . . linen in green-and-white or red-and-white plaids. And the effect of these under the soft tones of Italian pottery is especially lovely.

Another new hand-woven effect is a cloth showing Swedish influence in stripes, bands, checks and a few dots thrown in for good measure.

Leaflet on Glasses.

At your next luncheon you'll perhaps be serving things to drink as well as to eat. So maybe you'd like a copy of our leaflet illustrating and describing the proper glassware for the newly returned drinks. Coupon and inclosures will bring it to you.

Tomorrow: Sports dresses go in for color.

Menjou, One of the "10 Best Dressed Men," Has 100 Suits, But Says He Needs Only Three

He Insists Evening Clothes Are Not Needed to Be Smart.

Los Angeles, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—A man can be well dressed with three suits—dark blue, a well-cut tweed and a brown for street wear—Adolphe Menjou, actor who was selected as one of the ten best-dressed men in the world, said today.

Menjou, who himself has more than 100 suits, eliminated evening clothes as one of the prime necessities.

Three Are Enough.

"If a man can not afford a larger variety," he said, "he can be very presentable with three suits. One should be dark blue, for semi-formal occasions; one should be a well-cut, not too bright tweed for knockabout and sports wear (knickers to match stretch the usefulness of this outfit), and one should be brown or some dark mixture that lends itself to neat street wear.

"One can get along nicely with two pairs of flannels, but in such a limited wardrobe they both should be striped—they're easier to keep clean."

Menjou, ranking first of the Hollywood best-dressed, leads one school of sartorial elegance in Los Angeles. There are many tastes in this cosmopolitan center. Nothing is taboo, unless it be spats (because of the climate) and derby hats, which never have become popular, perhaps again because of the climate.

No Trussed Turkey.

The Menjou-Gable-Tone school naturally has its headquarters here. By virtue of a certain indefinable flair he imparts to all his clothing, Menjou probably rates top. He is one of the few men alive who doesn't wear that trussed-turkey look in morning coat or tails and on whom a gardenia looks natural.

Clark Gable's tailor wisely drapes the star's splendid physique with dark materials, sharply tailored to capitalize his broad shoulders and slender waist and hips. Slightly slimmer, Franchot Tone dresses in much the same style as de Menjou and Gable.

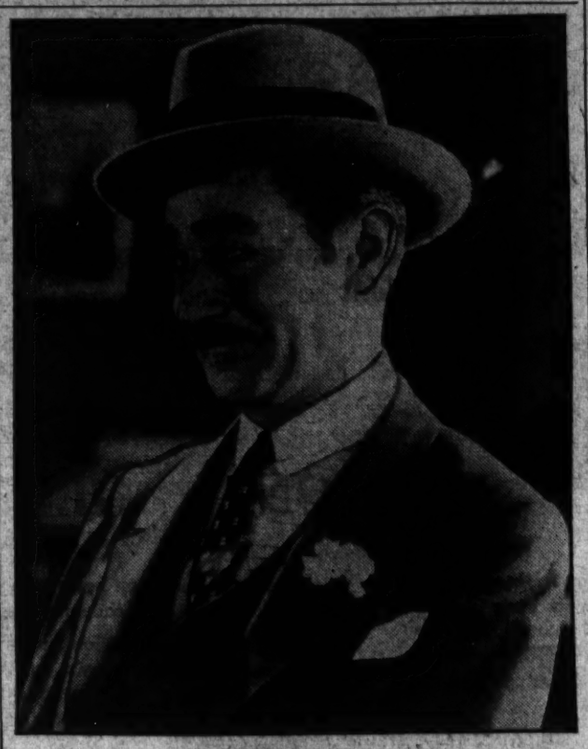
Splendid examples of the other school — the post-collegian — are found in Robert Montgomery and Douglas Fairbanks, sr. Montgomery is a nearly perfect specimen of the "careful casual" dresser, leaning to loosely draped tweeds and homespuns, British brogues and soft hats.

Fairbanks is the arch-dandy of the English-American school. He was the first by months to wear the shorter "high British" slacks, suede brogues, shellknit sweaters, hound's-tooth checks and other English importations designed for sport wear. Virtually all of the elder Fairbanks' clothes are British-tailored, which is to say jaunty as to sports wear and uncompromisingly severe as to evening.

With a few exceptions, the great run of male actors lean to clothes designed to enhance the appearance of hyper-masculinity. Deep-waisted double-breasted coats with heavily-padded shoulders are the usual day garb, while by the same token there are probably more double-breasted dinner jackets in Hollywood than anywhere else on earth.

As to Los Angeles proper, men's wear reflects climatic, cinematic and other influences, to differ considerably from that of the average large city. Even in midwinter, the streets are filled with flannels, buckskin shoes and other bright trappings elsewhere asociated with midsummer.

Except for the comparatively few actors, to whom it is a stock in trade, mustaches are rare in a land where even the middle-aged man wears a healthy tan and hopes he looks as boyish as he feels.



ADOLPH MENJOU,
recently named one of the world's 10 best dressed men, owns 100 suits, but declares anybody can be well dressed with three. He's also one of the rare few, it's said, who can stick a gardenia in his buttonhole and continue to look natural.

"Is It Christmas?" Asks Hungry Lad as Schools Serve Lunch

Hot Food Given Free to 1,400 Needy Pupils in Washington.

"Is today Christmas again?"

The question was asked in a trembling voice by a little boy in ragged clothes at one of Washington's public schools at noon yesterday. His large eyes were fixed on a brimming plate of thick soup.

"No," smiled the teacher, who had placed the food on the table before him, "you are going to have this every day now."

The boy was one of 1,400 needy children of the District served with free hot lunches on the first day of the program authorized last October by Harry L. Hopkins, director of Federal Emergency Relief, but not put into effect until early this month, when a survey revealed 4,000 children in need of the food.

The lunches are being served in 38 school buildings at present, but 30 more will be added next week, Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, in charge of the program, said last night. These buildings cannot serve the food, he explained, until equipment is installed for keeping and serving it.

Mr. Haycock said the program operated smoothly yesterday. The food was prepared and packed in sterili[illegible] milk cans by a downtown cafete[illegible] proprietor who also delivered the lunches in trucks. He will continue to donate this service until plans for preparing and serving the food are completed by relief officials.

The ultimate plan is to have the food prepared at regional centers and delivered to school buildings. CWA employes will be assigned to aid teachers and mothers in serving the nourishment.

At present, teachers and members of Parent-Teacher Associations are taking charge of the meals at the respective schools. Yesterday's menu consisted only of soup and rolls, but today milk will be added. The menu then will be changed daily.

Culbertson's Bridge

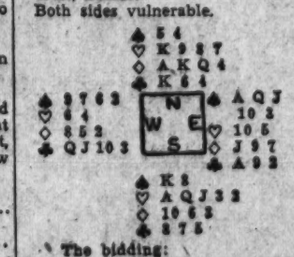
The Opening Lead.

The Opening lead at Contract is equivalent to the opening move at chess or checkers. In other words, it is the right to move first and to select to a certain extent the field upon which the battle to make or defeat the contract will be waged.

When a player is charged with the Opening lead and his partner has bid a suit, the ordinary rule, lacking a lead from a strong top honor combination, is the lead of a card of the suit bid by his partner, as his partner's bid has in all probability pointed out the most effective way of defeating the contract, or failing that, of holding the Declarer to the smallest possible number of tricks. There are, however, exceptions to this rule which every player should mark, learn, read, and inwardly digest. If a player realizes that in all probability he has the lead, or the right to play first, for the first and last time during a hand, he should utilize that privilege to the best possible advantage, even in those cases where it means disregarding the club given by his partner's bid and opening another suit.

The hand below is an example of the application of this principle with such effect that the contract, which would have been made had the Opening leader decided to play "wooden" Bridge, was defeated because he realized that the head placed on his shoulders had some other purpose than decoration.

West, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1◇	1♠	2♡
Pass	3♡	Pass	4♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

The natural and normal lead against a contract of four hearts by South is, of course, a spade, the suit bid by East, but West in the instance in question, fully realizing that such a lead was unlikely to aid in the development of any tricks for his partner, refused to open his partner's bid suit. Knowing that he might never be in the lead again and that he should take his one opportunity to make the most constructive lead he could find, West opened the club Queen and as a result the contract was defeated one trick, as East and West were thus able to cash three club tricks and the spade Ace. The opening of the spade, it will be observed, would have permitted the Declarer to make his contract as with this opening Time would have run in favor of the Declarer and against his opponents.

Good Bridge playing consists not only in following the rules when following the rules is best, but in quickly recognizing the situations in which a "wooden" following of rules will result disastrously to the defending partnership.

Calumet Corn Muffins.

1 cup sifted flour
1 cup corn meal
2 teaspoons combination baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
¼ cup molasses
1 egg, well beaten
1 tablespoon melted butter or other shortening

Sift flour once, measure, add corn meal, baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Combine milk, molasses, egg, and shortening; add gradually and beat. Bake in hot, greased muffin pans in hot oven (400 degrees F.) 20 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

Bitter Orange Marmalade.

(Makes 6-8 glasses)

1 grapefruit
2 oranges
1 lemon
¼ cup lemon juice

Slice unpeeled fruit very thin. Add three times as much water as fruit. Boil 20 minutes. Measure. Bring to boiling point. Add ¾ cup sugar for each cup of fruit. Boil 25 minutes or until it gives the jelly test. Just before removing from fire add ¼ cup lemon juice. Pour into sterilized glasses; cover with paraffin when cold.

While R Months Last It's Oyster Season

And Oysters Are One of the Best Vitamin Foods in the Diet.

Oysters are now at the height of their season. All lovers of oysters should make the most of them while the "R" months are still with us. It should be of interest to know that oysters are one of the best known sources of vitamins. They contain the five vitamins A, B, C, D, and G. Not only because of their popularity as a food, but because of their health qualities, we are giving a novel recipe suggestion:

Scalloped Oysters.

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
¾ cup milk and oyster liquor
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of white pepper
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 cup buttered bread crumbs
1 pint oysters

Melt butter in upper part of double boiler. Add flour and blend. Add milk and oyster liquor gradually, stirring constantly. Add seasonings. When thoroughly heated and blended, remove from fire. Slowly add mayonnaise, stirring constantly. Place a few bread crumbs in buttered casserole. Add part of the oysters and part of the cream sauce. Repeat until all the bread crumbs, oysters, and cream sauce are used, having bread crumbs on top. Bake in slow oven about 20 minutes or until brown. Serves four.

An exceedingly interesting tunic dress of rumba-rust wool is the one recently worn by Wynne Gibson.

The tunic is just a little short of knee-length and has a slit at the front which adds interest as well as width to the garment.

Stitched bows on the front and sleeves are drawn through unique metal buttons. The sleeves also boast diagonally stitched shoulder pleats.

Countess Gets Second Divorce in Two Years

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 2 (AP).—Countess Majorie de Aguirre, wife of Count Luis Marceleno de Aguirre, Spanish nobleman and resident of Buenos Aires, was granted a divorce here today. It was her second divorce obtained under Arkansas' 90 day divorce law within two years.

The countess, daughter of the late I. M. Skinner, New York broker, alleged both mental and physical cruelty. Before obtaining the divorce she announced her engagement to Prince Paolo Borghese, member of an old Italian family.

The Family Marketer

Corn Meal Is Nourishing and Can Be Used in Many Ways.

One of the cheapest and most nourishing foods is corn meal. It combines deliciously in a number of ways, is easy to prepare and, best of all, is so inexpensive.

Americans are great corn-eating people. We chew it on the cob, fry it in fritters, bake it in muffins. But the Indians had their own ways of preparing corn meal, the Mexicans theirs. Both appeal to American palates.

The Marketer wishes to thank the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture for some interesting recipes in which corn meal figures extensively.

You can buy scrapple already prepared, but why not try making it yourself? Here's how:

Homemade Scrapple.

Select 3 pounds of bony pieces of pork. Simmer in 3 quarts of water until the meat drops from the bone. Strain off the broth, remove the bone, taking care to get all the tiny pieces, and chop the meat fine. There should be about 2 quarts of broth, and if necessary add water to make this quantity. Bring the broth to a boiling point, add slowly two cups of corn meal.

Cook the mixture until it is a thick mush, stirring almost constantly. Add the chopped meat, salt and any other seasoning desired, such as onion juice, sage and thyme. Pour the hot scrapple into oblong enamelware pans which have been rinsed in cold water. Let stand until cold, slice and brown in hot skillet.

If the scrapple is rich with fat, no more fat is needed for frying.

Tamale pie variation of the Mexican tamales adds to the starch of the corn meal, protein, minerals, fats and some vitamins found in the other ingredients.

Tomale Pie.

2 cups corn meal
2 teaspoons salt
2 cups cold water
4 cups boiling water
1 ounce suet
1 onion, chopped
1 pound ground beef
1 cup canned tomatoes
¼ teaspoon salt, for seasoning
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Mix corn meal, salt and cold water until smooth, add boiling water, stirring constantly, then cook over hot water for 1 hour. Render the suet and cook the onion in the fat for a few minutes, add the beef and tomato and simmer until the red color disappears from the meat. Season with salt and pepper. Place a layer of the mush in a greased baking dish, add the meat mixture and cover with the rest of the mush. Bake in moderate over (375 degrees F.) about 30 minutes or until the mush is slightly browned

A corn meal dessert supplies the starch in a diet if potatoes are omitted from the main course.

Baked Indian Pudding.

1 quart milk
1-3 cup yellow corn meal
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup molasses
½ to 1 teaspoon ginger

Cook the milk, corn meal and salt in a double boiler for 20 minutes. Add the molasses and ginger, pour into a greased baking dish and bake in a very moderate oven (about 300 degrees F.) for 2 hours. Serve hot with vanilla ice cream, or chill and serve with cream.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

There is more than one kind of dyspepsia and more than one cause thereof. It follows that the man who takes a treatment because some neighbor says it cured him is apt to be disappointed. There are certain principles, however, that all dyspeptics should know about. Some of them can be applied in most cases of the disorders.

Many dyspeptics are overweight. It seems that the causes of obesity are often the same as those of dyspepsia. In many instances the dietetic treatment carried out in order to reduce weight and to keep it down will also benefit the symptoms that go by the name dyspepsia. If a person with those habits that make for obesity will change his habits so that his weight is lessened and remains down he will find that the dyspepsia symptoms will not trouble him much. Therefore, fat dyspeptics must reduce, and thereafter keep the weight down.

Lean, underweight dyspeptics should bring their weight up to normal. Again, habits and foods that contribute to underweight also promote dyspepsia, and whatever overcomes one is beneficial for the other.

Whatever the main cause of dyspepsia may be, the constipation habit contributes to the discomfort.

Sometimes when stomach digestion is slow and an attack of dyspepsia seems to impend, one or more glasses of water may bring relief. In some instances a glass of charged but unflavored water is more effective than plain water.

Exercise and work are excellent though not always successful cures for dyspepsia. Rowing, horseback riding, bicycle riding and walking are excellent. The mental processes, and particularly the emotions, are important factors in dyspepsia. Worry and anxiety are potent causes of it. The more violent emotions are harmful to dyspeptics. Whatever may be the principal cause of the stomach discomfort, harmful emotions are apt to contribute to the harm. On the other hand, whatever scheme of treatment is being used, indulgence in the harmful emotions should be one of the prohibitions.

Experience is a somewhat unreliable but nevertheless valuable teacher for the dyspeptic. He learns in time that certain foods are harmful to him, however wholesome they may be for others. He is apt to follow what he thinks experience teaches him, and about three times out of four he will be right. However, there are drawbacks. Some dyspeptics are undernourished because they are afraid to eat. Watching the digestion may provoke dyspepsia.

What Today Means

"Capricorn"

If January 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 10:35 to 11:45 a. m., and from 5 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 10:30 to 11:30 p. m.

If you were born on January 3, you will possibly find yourself, on this date, called upon to do a friend a favor, and the granting of this request will result in your receiving a practical demonstration of the saying, "Cast thy bread upon the water; for thou shalt find it after many days." You will find it very hard to retain your temper during the next forty-eight hours, for some petty annoyances will occur, but be wise and completely ignore them, for they will prove trivial, and unworthy of your slightest attention.

The child born on January 3 will develop into the most lovable character. As it grows older you will rejoice in the spirit of generosity and unselfishness that will be manifested. The child will also have a very great love for the artistic, and if given the opportunity will become actively interested in music or painting.

If you were born on January 3 and are a woman, you possess such a cheerful personality that both men and women are attracted to you. Your fondness for home will result in a most successful career both as a wife and mother. Be careful you do not spoil your children by too much indulgence. If you are unmarried, you will receive a great deal of attention this year. Be careful it does not turn your head. Your place is at home, as a good man's wife, for you have all the attributes a man desires his mate to have.

It will be wise for men born on this date to be very cautious about any new investments offered for their consideration, and a great deal of discretion should be used before signing any papers or documents. Your great fault is being inclined to accept everything on faith, and you are very likely to get "stung" unless you are careful. You are very generous, and you should not commit yourself too freely to give financial help to this, that, and the other thing, until you are satisfied that it is worthy of your support. It may be well for you to be more careful about giving vent to emphatic expression of hastily formed opinions on some of the present economic and social problems, for this will cause you to jeopardize friendships you value.

It is possible for people fortunate enough to be born on January 3 to feel happy on this date, for your future prospects are most promising, there being every indication that there is a great deal of good coming your way. You will have a great many of your hopes realized, and many of the fears you have entertained will pass into oblivion before another twelve months roll around.

Successful people born on January 3:

John A. King, statesman.
Lucretia Mott, woman suffragist and preacher.
Thomas H. Watts, Governor of Alabama.
Larkin G. Mead, sculptor.
Henry Holt, publisher.
Edward S. Renwick, inventor.

RADIO ADDRESS OF HON. THOMAS O'MALLEY

Member of Congress From Wisconsin

As Given by Him Over the General Broadcasting System's Radio Network on Sunday, December 31. Mr. O'Malley Was Introduced by Dr. J. E. Pope, President of the National Old Age Pension Association, Sponsors of the Nation-Wide Federal Old Age Pension Movement.

NATIONAL OLD AGE PENSIONS

Perhaps no subject could be chosen that might so easily be wrapped in sentiment and decorated with sympathy inspiring adjectives as that of old age and our moral obligation of providing for the security of those untold thousands of our fellow citizens now traveling in the twilight on the road of life.

But when the sponsors of my time on the radio this afternoon asked me to speak as one of the many members of the United States Congress who favor the principle of old age pensions, I felt that in the time allotted me I would discuss the practical, rather than the sentimental, side of this important subject.

Many years ago I read a passage in an essay on government that has remained in my mind ever since. It seems to express in a most concise manner why our National Government should interest itself in the problem of old age pensions for all of our citizens. The quotation to which I refer was substantially the following:

> "Divested from all qualifications, the basic reason for man's submission to the regulations of government is that he shall be guaranteed by government in return the opportunity to live out his normal span of life in peace, decency and reasonable comfort."

For nearly as far back as history records, however, governments have interested themselves only in legislation regarding man's relationship to his individual fellow man. We may be thankful indeed that, in spite of the woe and sorrow of the depression, the broken hearts and broken homes of the past four years, the period we are rapidly leaving has brought a new conception of government, a conception that also recognizes the dire need of legislating man's relationship to an economic system over which the individual has lost control.

This new conception of government which recognizes the need for a national elimination of child labor, a national minimum wage law and regulation of working conditions, a national system of providing work for the unemployed instead of charity and a national plan for saving the homes and farms of the toilers and producers must logically also recognize the need for a national plan of old age pensions.

In spite of the pronouncements of famous economists of the years past, whose books are the subject of study by all the students of economy, I can not believe the theory that "production will support consumption" will hold water, either today or in the future. We have reached a point, my friends, where men and women must be honorably retired from the ranks of competitive labor at a reasonable age, in order to make room for the younger workers with families to rear and careers to carve out of our economic system. At the same time, these older citizens must not be left to starve, but must be guaranteed an income that will keep them in the ranks of the consumers of goods without making them the pitiful objects of charity.

Charity in any form has always seemed an abhorrent thing, and it must be so especially to the useful citizen who, through the vagaries of life, finds his old age only a series of disheartening days of dependence upon friends, relatives or institutions. How much better, more logical and humane, then, to provide a system, on a national scale, of retiring our citizens on an old age compensation basis. We retire our postal employes, veteran soldiers and sailors, policemen, firemen, teachers and others. Certainly, to my mind, the rank and file of our citizens deserve the equal advantages and security in old age which these special groups of citizens enjoy through organization and their willingness to contribute a small share of their earnings to a pension.

Many persons will say that it is the duty of everyone to save for their old age—to lay aside some part of their earnings in stocks and bonds, or in banks, so that they may be assured of enough to live on in their declining years. Others will say that there are institutions for the aged and infirm, supported by the taxpayers, where old people can be taken care of when they have been cast off like an old and worn machine by our economic system.

You have only to look around you to see a few of the millions of our citizens who, unfamiliar with the ways of money and finance, saved for years only to find themselves destitute with the winter of lifetime approaching.

Taking the argument of institutions, I have always felt that there never was a more glaring example of man's inhumanity to man than a poorhouse or an old people's home. No matter how well run or how kindly and conscientious the directors of an institution, who is there among us who would not sooner receive the money in cash that it takes to support one person in an institution and use it to maintain a little home of our own, no matter how humble? Think of a man and wife, together for 40 or 50 years, now separated under the same roof, seeing each other only at regulated intervals, after those many years that have made them almost one person in their dependency upon one another! How much more happiness would be theirs with a small income on which to live out their little span of life together.

From the taxpayers' standpoint, the institution argument in place of an adequate old age pension plan is a poor one. Figures gathered by the National Old Age Pension Association from 787 average institutions show that the cost of maintaining one person in a poorhouse is $508 per year. Add to that the fact that the property of an institution is exempt from taxation, as well as the salaries of the employees in the institution, and you further increase the taxpayers' burden for providing for our indigent old people. In addition, a large part of the tax dollar for the maintenance of old people in institutions goes, in reality, to supporting an army of job holders. I know of an institution maintained by a county government where 112 employees are found necessary to take care of less than 300 people.

It doesn't take much figuring to show that the plan of paying a pension of $30 per month to persons who voluntarily retire from all competitive labor would result in a distinct saving to the taxpayers over any system of institutions ever devised.

The raising of the funds out of which to pay this pension from the earnings of younger workers would seem a fair proposition, since, in most cases, the small contribution of the younger worker to retire an older person would be in effect merely a small tax for permanent employment, actually a "job tax." I don't believe, once clearly understanding the facts, that there would be many among our millions of young unemployed men who would not gladly pay a few pennies out of their wages to obtain a job brought about by the retirement of an older worker, rather than parade his poverty and unemployment in front of a coaster wagon dragged home twice a week from some unemployment relief station.

Many of you, my friends, will probably reason that the problem of old age pensions is one entirely up to the State governments. Most of us who have long favored the old age pension plan once thought likewise. The record, however sad it may seem, shows nevertheless that old age pension legislation, where enacted by individual States, has been, in most cases, a ghastly failure.

There are many reasons for this failure, but I shall only try to point out a few of the most important. First of all, to pay old age pensions, the State must obtain the revenue, which can only be accomplished by taxation. Any increase in expenditures results inevitably in increased taxation. Thus the manufacturer, farmer and other producers of the State must obtain higher prices for the things they produce to cover the higher taxes. The products of a State without old age pension laws, without minimum wage laws and without other laws of great social benefit, can be sold cheaper than those of the more progressive and humane State. This places the progressive State at a disadvantage in finding a market for its naturally higher priced products. To be fair to all, then, the matter of old age pension legislation should be national, just as the other great advances in social justice made by our Government in the past few months have been national.

And, again, the State with an old age pension law right next to a State without such a provision for the aged and infirm might soon find itself crowded with the older citizens of its less progressive sister State, anxious to take up residence just before reaching the pension age in order to qualify for its benefits. Just as all the citizens of the Nation have recognized the inhumanity of permitting little children to toil their short childhood away in sweat shops and factories in many sections of the country, we are approaching also the time when all of us recognize that the aged and infirm of one State should not be denied the advantages of their fellow citizens in another State simply because they may have chosen to live and work in a particular section of this broad and wonderful country of ours.

Those are but a few of the reasons why such a universal problem as an adequate system of old age pensions should be a matter of national legislation. Many more might be added, but my time is limited and I must confine myself to the high points of this important step in our progress toward a better social order for the rank and file of our fellow Americans.

I know I am not alone in the Congress in favoring the pinciple of old age pensions. My own State was one of the pioneers, not only in realizing the need for legislation of this kind, but in the enactment of legislation providing for pensions for widows with families to support, for compensation to disabled workers, for minimum wages and maximum hours in industry and legislation of similar broad Christian principles.

Many other nations have had systems of retirement pensions for workers in all branches of industry and trade, as well as old age pensions for unclassified workers of every kind, from the farmer to the hospital worker and from the teacher to the shoemaker. The last four years of depression have taught us that business, finance and many other things in our social order may totter and tremble around us, but one thing remains firm and steadfast, able to stretch out a helping hand to us if we ourselves ask for it—and that is our National Government.

I think when I review in my mind the wonderful strides made by the Congress of the United States in legislation passed at the special session of last spring of a phrase in one of the speeches of our great leader and President, Franklin Roosevelt. He said:

> "We are about to enter upon a new period of liberalism and sane reform in the United States, and we shall require unity of purpose, if not of opinion, if we are to achieve permanent and practical results."

Those words, when uttered early last year, were prophetic of the many splendid reforms in the basic laws of our land made in the year we are just bidding farewell. They are today prophetic of more reforms in our social order in the year to come. And as one of the reforms in our laws to which I look forward, I trust that the efforts of the National Old Age Pension Association, enlisting Nation-wide support for old age pensions, will bear rich fruit and that the crowning achievement of 1934 will be the enactment by Congress of a national old age pension act.

What the law will specify in completed form no one would presume to predict. But if it provides a reasonably adequate pension, raised by a sound and equitable method of taxation, it will spell the end of the poorhouse, provide countless new jobs for younger workers and result in a real saving to the taxpayers. On that basis, such a law would not only have my vote, but I feel sure it would have the votes of an overwhelming majority of the Congress.

When a law of this kind is finally passed by the Congress we will have marked a new milestone in our progress in America:

> "Where fear no longer walks with age,
> But peace and comfort takes its place."

Commission Rejects Five District Bills

Approve Only 2 Offered by Congressional Committees.

Still Undecided on Plan to Abolish Office of Coroner.

The District Commissioners indicated yesterday they will not be "yes" men when they disapproved five out of seven bills submitted to them by the Senate and House District Committees.

They also revealed they have not made up their minds on the proposal of the previous board to substitute a medical examiner and an assistant corporation counsel for the coroner. This plan, copied after the New York system and sponsored by Senator Copeland of New York, had the hearty indorsement of Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, chairman of the former board.

Commissioner George E. Allen said yesterday he had heard of the proposal and that he would be interested in seeing the bill now being drafted by the corporation counsel. Until that time he will reserve his opinion. The coroner's office comes under his jurisdiction.

Approve Land Disposal.

The commissioners approved two bills authorizing them to dispose of unused land, including the old Potomac School property on the east side of Twelfth street southwest, between D and E streets, which is assessed at $24,311, and a small strip of land at 3204 Brothers place southeast.

They followed their predecessors in disapproving the frequently-repeated proposal to make the women's bureau in the Police Department an agency of Congress rather than the commissioners.

Explaining that the present women's Bureau has the same status as the traffic and detective bureaus, the District heads said its size and responsibilities at ths time do not justify the appointment of an officer above the rank of captain.

In declining to approve a bill to provide an appropriation for the alteration and repair of buildings at the Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital, the commissioners said:

Private Institutions.

"The Board of Public Welfare believes it is against good public policy to appropriate public funds for the erection or repair of private hospitals or the payment of debts of such private institutions. The Commissioners concur with the Board of Public Welfare in this matter."

The Commissioners pointed out that the object of the bill is to refire an indebtedness of $50,000 incurred by the hospital in erecting a new building recently. District officials, they explained, had no part in the project, nor did they approve it.

Unfavorable reports also were made on bills to establish a holiday in honor of Thomas Jefferson and to exempt from taxation certain property of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Writer's Wife Funeral Today

Mrs. Robert B. Armstrong to Be Buried in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Robert Armstrong, of 3554 Edmunds street northwest, who was found dead from monoxide fumes at the wheel of her automobile in her garage Monday, will be held at Gawler's undertaking establishment at 1 o'clock today. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Armstrong was the wife of Robert B. Armstrong, sr., veteran newspaper correspondent.

Acting Coroner A. MacGruder MacDonald said death was due to monoxide, after Mrs. Armstrong apparently fainted at the wheel.

5 Missing Persons Sought by Police

Two Youths Hunted in Maryland.

Five persons were reported missing from their homes yesterday.

Two 14-year-old boys, Arthur Penn, of 1219 Otis street northwest, and Billy Fanning, of 1356 Spring road northwest, apparently seized by wanderlust, were sought by police in nearby Maryland. The youngsters disappeared last Monday.

Mildred Fulton, 26, reported to have been in ill health for more than three months, was missing from her home at 666 Kenyon street northwest. When last seen she was wearing blue coat, brown hat and black shoes. She has red hair.

Mrs. Ellen Sullivan asked police to search for her son, Leo Sullivan, 33. She left no address, but told police she would call again.

Alfred Bell, colored 11, disappeared from 208 L street southwest.

Ickes Orders Mall Development Resumed And Seeks to "Educate" Tree Lovers to Plan

These photos show the Mall as it was envisaged in the McMillan plan of 1901, a development which was started last month only to be interrupted by complaints against removal of trees. Top—General view from Monument to Capitol showing rows of trees flanking the open vista in center. The Federal building triangle is on the left. Structures facing each other in the Mall are the proposed museum buildings, still in the planning stage. Bottom—Closeup of the central area looking toward the Capitol. The plan has been modified to conform with modern conditions, but is essentially the same. The open vista will be 300 feet wide. Tree lovers have been overruled and work on the vast project will be resumed soon.

Third Proposal To Reopen D.C. Bank Prepared

Col. Cooper's Plan Due to Be Submitted at Parley Today.

Progress was reported yesterday by Treasury Department officials following a second conference regarding reopening of the restricted United States Savings Bank. It was attended by Col Wade H. Cooper, president of the bank, department officials and representatives of the bank's stockholders and depositors.

Another conference is scheduled for today, at which Col. Cooper is expected to present a third plan for reopening the bank, the department having withheld approval of his second plan. A committee representing the bank's depositors has submitted a plan not yet made public.

Presentation of a third plan by Col. Cooper, however, will in no way restrain his request to the District Court of Appeals for a review of an adverse lower court decision on his original reopening plan.

Col. Cooper's suit to compel the Treasury Department to reopen the bank under this first plan was dismissed in District Supreme Court several weeks ago. His counsel plan an appeal and its advance on the calendar will be sought.

Officials of Franklin National Bank still await Treasury Department approval of their plan to reopen as a component of the proposed merger creating the new Mechanics-Franklin Savings Bank. This secured, they wil lsolicit this bank's depositors for agreements to the merger and sell them, stockholders and the general public the necessary $200,000 stock.

Police Arrest Man, Seize Alleged Rum

A quantity of alleged liquor was confiscated and one man arrested yesterday when police raided second-floor quarters of a house at 1512 L street northwest.

Eugene Ferrari, of 1526 Wisconsin avenue northwest, was held under bond of $1,000. He was charged with sale and possession. Police say they seized 20 quarts of spirits.

Bigger and Better Fair In '34, Chicago Promises

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP).—A bigger and better world's fair in 1934 was the new year's promise of Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Century of Progress exposition, as he revealed plans for the reopening next June.

"We have sought to furnish a number of improvements and new features to make the 1934 exposition of equal interest to those who were able to see the 1933 exposition," said Mr. Dawes.

Tags Don't Match Cars, Ohio Women Complain

Columbus, Jan. 2 (AP).—Milady wants automobile licenses to match her automobile. Glen M. Dailey, registrar of motor vehicles, reported today that many women objected to the new 1934 maroon license plates because "they don't go well with our new car."

A deputy registrar suggested to one that she might try the tags of some other States if they would match her aesthetic tastes.

Scores of Old Maples and Oaks to Fall, Making Room for Others.

Model Will Be on Display to Acquaint Public With Project.

Progress on the elaborate Mall development, halted three weeks ago by the complaints of tree lovers, will be resumed in a few days when workmen return to cutting down scores of old trees.

Satisfied it would be inexpedient to doom a 32-year-old program, involving the expenditure of $600,000 in public works funds, to mollify the objectors, Secretary Harold H. Ickes has decided to go ahead with the improvements, The Post learned yesterday.

The Interior Department head reached his decision following a New Year's Day inspection tour over the area with C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks. He is expected to issue an order this week authorizing resumption of tree removal operations.

Work Stopped December 15.

Preliminary work on the Mall was mysteriously stopped December 15(only a few hours after workmen had started to level and remove oaks, maples and other trees between monument and Capitol. There was no official explanation until two weeks later when Secretary Ickes, an avowed defender of arboreal life, said he had ordered the work stopped pending personal investigation.

Nineteen trees, all dead except three, were taken away before the workmen were calld off. According to park officials, all trees in the Mall must be cleared away before constructive landscaping can begin. view of Secretary Icke's latest decision, the Office of National Capital Parks yesterday announced an 'education scheme" to acquaint the public with the Mall development. It is in the form of a minutely detailed model showing the proposed roadways, rows of stately elms which will be planted and the open vista between monument and Capitol.

Model on Display Soon.

The model will go on display tomorrow or Friday at the Navy Building, with someone on duty at all times to explain the project.

"I believe it will make clearer to critics that removal of the old trees for a systematic planting program is desirable," Finnan said last night.

The two inner rows of trees will be planted first, he said. There will be eight rows altogether, flanking the four roadways. Original plans called for American elms exclusively, but, because of the Dutch elm disease prevalent in the East, they may be modified to include oaks. Roughly, three trees will be planted for every one removed.

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP).—Five physicians today, after a consultation over the condition of Moe Rosenberg, indicted Democratic politician, expressed fear he was a victim of amoebic dysentery.

Rosenberg's trial before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson on charges of tax evasion was continued today until such a time as he could appear in court.

2 Boys, 14, Disappear; Are Believed Together

Police yesterday were asked to look out for two 14-year-old boys who disappeared Monday and are believed to be together.

They are Arthur Penn, 1219 Otis place norhtwest, and Billy Fanning, 1356 Spring road northwest. Both are about 5 feet 6 inches tall and weigh about 125 pounds. Arthur was wearing a blue sweater, tan tweed knickers and a leather helmet. Billy wore a light sweatshirt and tan corduroy pants.

District Police Still Lenient With Rum Buyers in Maryland

Orderly Purchasers for Private Use Are Immune; Prior Seizures High.

Records of Lieut. George M. Little's liquor squad yesterday revealed that not one arrest has been made among thousands of the District's thirsty who have journeyed across the line to nearby Maryland liquor stores, and brought back beverages for private consumption.

Shortly after spirits became legal in Maryland, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, announced officers would be lenient with orderly purchasers bringing private stocks across the line to their homes.

Lieut. Little's men, however, during the three months ended December 31, seized a total of 7,066 quarts of alcohol, whisky, gin, home brew and wine. illegally possessed or peddled here, and destroyed 7,800 gallons of mash. The squad arrested 442 persons for illicit sale or possession, and two large stills were destroyed.

Whisky and liquors led the field in beverages seized, with a total of 5,258 quarts. A total of 1,588 quarts of alcohol, 50 quarts of wine and 170 bottles of home brew was confiscated. Also 24 automobiles were confiscated.

Of all the arrests, only one was for manufacturing whisky. Thirty-three persons were taken into custody for permitting gaming.

Lieut. Little's forces became a combined liquor and vice squad, with a secret personnel, on New Year's Day.

Copeland Will Speak On Rackets Tonight

Senator R. S. Copeland will address the class in contemporary events at American University Graduate School, 1901 F street northwest tonight at 8 p. m. on "The Nation Grapples With Crime and Racketeering." This series of Wednesday evening programs is open to the public.

Letts Denies Duke Charge Of False Bill

Attorney in Disbarment Action Clashes Over Judge's Testimony.

Allegations in Appeal Claimed Inaccurate by Lawyer.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, District Supreme Court, yesterday denied from the witness stand that he had sent up to the District Court of Appeals a "diluted, deleted, false, inaccurate and incomplete" bill of exceptions as charged by Attorney Jesse C. Duke.

Duke is on trial in disbarment proceedings for accusing Justice Letts and United States Attorney Leo A. Rover of sending up the bill of exceptions.

In recounting the events leading up to the preparation of the bill, Justice Letts said Duke did not appear during the trial of a rum ring conspiracy case, from which arose the dispute. He declared Duke came in, first, on the appeal.

After a discussion of the bill, Justice Letts said, Duke declared he "wouldn't sign" it. He complained that the transcript of the trial took some 1,808 pages, whereas the bill of exceptions was written in 169 pages. There were no other objections, Justice Letts said.

Asked a question by Duke, Justice Letts shook his head in negation while Lucian Vandoren, acting as Duke's prosecutor, jumped to his feet with an objection. There followed a heated exchange between Duke and Vandoren which was only broken up by Chief Justice A. A. Wheat.

Duke indicated he wanted the "nod of the head" to appear in the record, while the Chief Justice indicated that it should be stricken. Turning to Vandoren, Duke said "that something neither you nor this court can strike from the record."

Further along, Duke said he did not wish to "wet nurse" Vandoren, and when the latter inquired about the remark, Duke directed him to address himself to the court.

"That is something you can do too, Mr. Duke," Chief Justice Wheat replied crisply. Cross-examination of Justice Letts will be resumed today, with Duke acting as his own attorney.

Mellon, Mills Win OleomargarineSuit

$250,000 Action in Tax Dispute Dismissed.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, District Supreme Court, yesterday dismissed a suit of the Standard Nut Margarine Co. against former Secretaries of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon and Ogden L. Mills for $250,000.

It was charged that the conduct of several officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau in assessing the company's product at 10 cents a pound under the oleomargarine act seriously affected the company's business.

In reply, Mellon and Mills asserted they were "engaged in the performance of an official duty requiring the exercise of judgment and discretion." This, they said, rendered them privileged from suit. Justice Adkins upheld this view.

City Club Receiver Is Sought in Suit

Bondholder Asks Fund Be Accounted for.

Suit to have the District Supreme Court appoint a receiver for the City Club was filed yesterday by Harold M. Dudley, 2316 Nineteenth street northwest.

Charging that there are defaults in payments on the first trust, Dudley also claimed the building had been advertised for sale to satisfy alleged arrears in taxes. He described himself as a bondholder.

Named as defendants are the American Security & Trust Co., and William Montgomery and Herbert T. Shannon, all as trustees; the City Club, S. Jones Hill, record owner of the building; the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., and J. Homer Chase. Besides appointment of a receiver the suit asks that the present management be required to account for money received through operation of the place.

Brief Sport

Ice Draws 50,000 in Two Days, Then Melts.

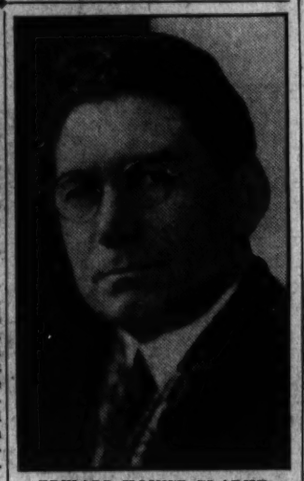
Ice skating on the Lincoln Memorial pool, cut short Sunday by the abrupt rise in temperature, attracted 50,000 persons, according to figures disclosed yesterday.

The sport lasted only two and a half days—Friday, Saturday and Sunday until noon—but that was long enough to attract 32,000 skaters and 18,000 spectators. Sunday forenoon witnessed the climax, when there were 12,000 skaters on the ice at one time.

Attendance might have been 50 per cent greater, park officials said, had the ice lasted through Sunday afternoon and permitted playing of the scheduled hockey game. At least 5,000 spectators had reached the pool before game time, only to learn that the contest had been called off.

Illness Balks Federal Trial Of Former Klansman Chief

Clarke Wins Respite From Mail Fraud Charge; Hearing Jan. 11.



EDWARD YOUNG CLARKE.

Edward Young Clarke, one of the early sponsors of the Ku Klux Klan, that gained much prominence a few years ago, was too ill to appear yesterday at a removal hearing on an indictment charging him with using the mails fraudulently to promote another National fraternal organization.

The hearing was postponed tentatively until January 11, but it is expected the state of Clarke's health will require a further adjournment.

Clarke and his wife are both charged in the Federal indictment with selling certificates to promote "Esskaye," an organizatoin dedicated "to the cure of all National ills." The indictment, drawn in Jacksonville, Fla., alleges the certificates were sold to several Jacksonville residents on the representation they would reap substantial returns, because Esskaye expected to collect membership fees from 5,000,000 Americans. According to the charge, however, "no members joined the said order."

The Clarkes were arrested here two weeks ago. The indictment declares Clarke himself is president of Esskaye and Mrs. Clark is its secretary-treasurer.

In 1915 William Joseph Simmons, preacher and traveling salesman, went to the top of Stone Mountain, Ga., lighted a fiery cross and proclaimed the founding of the new Ku Klux Klan. Five years later his organization was almost on the rocks when Clarke, an advertising man, was drawn into the picture. Under his sponsorship the klan mushroomed into National prominence, with consequent profit to Clarke, the klan's imperial wizzard and imperial klaliff. But Dr. Hiran Wesley Evans, of Texas, eventually wrested the leadership from Clarke and Simmons and it was under him that the organization reached the height of its power at the Democratic National Convention of 1924 in New York, when the klan rallied behind William Gibbs McAdoo for the Presidential nomination.

Clarke's career has been eventful. He has been fined for violation of the Mann act and indicted once before for fraudulent use of the mails.

Federal Rolls Fast Climbing To 1921 Record

73,131 in Departments Here, Says November List of Gains.

During November 985 additional persons in Washington became permanent employes of the Government, bringnig the total number of Federal workers in executive branches here to 73,131, reports of the Civil Service Commission revealed yesterday.

Temporary work in Federal departments was given to 915 men and women during November. Permanent Government employes here now total 65,830 and temporary employes 7,301.

In the National Capital and in the field the grand total of all persons on the Government pay roll in executive branches, exclusive of legislative and judicial departments, is now 588,035. By its continued expansion, the report indicated, the Federal establishment is approaching the record of July, 1921, when there were 597,482 persons on the pay roll here and in the field.

The greatest permanent increase for November here was shown by the Public Works Administration, with 430 additions. Others include the Navy Department with 372; Interior, 289; Agriculture, 266; NRA, 214; Emergency Relief Administration, 122, and Treasury, 100. A few other departments were below 50.

In the field, permanent workers totaled 459,965 and emporary employes 54,939. The Postoffice showed the greatest net decrease during November with a net loss of 1,254.

2 Killed When Truck Oy Dynamite Explodes

Columbus, Wis., Jan. 2 (AP).—William Durkin, 21, and George Pitel, 25, were killed today when their truck overturned and part of its load of dynamite and powder exploded.

The driver was killed outright, while the other, trapped in the wreckage, perished in flames while a farmer sought to save him. The truck carried 1,000 pounds of powder and 900 pounds of dynamite.

103 Rebels Jailed In Argentine Priso

Conflicting Reports Are Given on Revolt.

Porto Alegre, Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, Jan. 2 (AP).—Although the rebel movement in Corrientes Province of Argentina was believed squelched, conflicting reports today came to Uruguayana, Brazil, from Santo Tome, northernmost point of the outbreak.

Meanwhile, 103 leaders of the radical party were imprisoned on Martin Garcia Island, traditional political prison of Argentina, dispatches from Buenos Aires said.

Among the prisoners, dispatches from the Argentine capital revealed, are former President Marcelo T. Alvear and Honorio Pueyrredon, former Ambassador to the United States.

Youth's Death Plunge Blamed On Landlords

Owners of Building Held Liable for Allowing Darkened Shaft.

Negligence on the part of owners and occupants of a building at 1005 H street northwest was held responsible by a coroner's jury yesterday for the death of Fred Davis, 18, messenger boy, who plunged three floors down a darkened elevator shaft last week.

Simon Lyon and his brother, R. B. H. Lyon, attorneys with offices in the Evans Building, were reported owners of the building. The premises are leased by the A. Zichtl Bookbinding Co. No arrests have been made.

Davis, employed by a messenger service, was delivering boks to be bound for the Georgetown Medical School. He stepped into the open shaft and fell to his death.

Clyde Wilson, 19, a fellow messenger, accompanied Davis. He said when they arrived at the building employes directed them to the third floor. Davis led the way and stepped into the shaft, believing it to be a doorway.

Davis, who lived at 939 M street northwest, had been employed as a messenger for several years.

Two Arrested After Auto Strikes Tree

Two men were arrested for investigation yesterday at Georgetown Hospital following an automobile accident near Falls Church, Va.

Howard Heffron, 27, of 616 G street northwest, and Amos Zinnamon, of 927 Eighth street northwest, were taken into custody by Seventh Precinct Police when they applied for treatment of slight injuries. Police said the automobile in which they were riding was stolen Monday from Eleventh and H streets northwest. The machine skidded and struck a tree, Virginia authorities said.

Office Machines Taken In Pair of Burglaries

Thieves who yesterday forced entrance to two business establishments apparently had some figuring and writing to do.

Charles F. Schrumpf, manager of the Cook Waste Paper Co., 59 Pierce street northeast, reported a calculator and adding machine missing. They were valued at $75. An adding machine, a typewriter and a check writer were reported sotlen from 1634 Fourteenth street northwest. Edward G. Ernest placed his loss at $128.

Appeals Court Scores Lobby Fee Contracts

Contingent Pay Is Held by Judge to Imply Corrupt Means.

Former Representative Barred From Pay for Services.

Lobbyists were dealt another blow yesterday, this time by the District Court of Appeals.

The court, while recognizing the institution of lobbying, ruled that lobbyists could not be paid on a contingent basis.

This means that no longer can a Washington lobbyist legally make a contract with a client providing that his fee shall be contingent on his success in obtaining what the client wants.

Hits Contingent Fee.

The court observed that "a contract for services to be rendered by an agent or attorney before a legislative body in securing the passage of a measure is lawful." It added, however, that "where the conpensation for procuring legislation is contingent, the contract is void as against public policy, regardless of whether corrupt practices are resorted to or contemplated."

The ruling was made in reversing a decision by which former Representive Ralph S. Gilbert, of Kentucky, sought to collect a fee for services rendered.

Mr. Gilbert brought suit against John J. Noonan in the municipal court. Noonan, the suit disclosed, had retained the Kentuckian in connection with the fight to secure a 3-cent fare for school children. He was to be paid $500 as a retainer and $1,000 if the reduced fare proposition was enacted.

Not at that time a member of Congress, Gilbert was to appear before the Public Utilities Commission, and any Congressional committees holding hearings * * * and was by argument and the production of data and evidence * * * to endeavor to bring about such a reduction of fares by order of the Public Utilities Commission or by Congressional enactment.

"Implies Sinister Means."

Suit was brought for the unpaid balance alleged due Gilbert, and Noonan filed a demurrer, which was overruled.

In writing the decision on the appeal, Associate Justice Robb said "agreements for compensation contingent upon success suggest the use of sinister and corrupt means for the accomplishment of the end desired. The law meets the suggestion of evil and strikes down the contract from its inception."

The contract provided that only lawful means were to be used in the campaign to reduce students' fares.

21 Banks Take Deposit Surety

All Unrestricted Concerns Get Membership in U. S. Plan.

All unrestricted banks of Washington are members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation system for insurance of deposits up to $2,500, it was learned yesterday. The 21 National Banks, savings banks and trust companies of the city now licensed to do a full banking business are included.

Guarantee of deposits up to $2,500 is in effect in all these banks. Banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System automatically became participants of the insurance fund, while other institutions met requirements for membership after special examination.

Insurance of deposits will be effective under the temporary plan until July 1, when larger amounts are to be insured under a proposed permanent plan.

Catcher Wilson Signs Contract to Manage Phillies for 1934 and 1935

Player-Pilot Succeeds Shotton

Club to Carry Salary of Deposed Leader for Two Years.

Wilson Broke in With Phils; Would Rebuild Pitching Staff.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2 (AP).—To Catcher Jimmy Wilson, a native son who made good in the "big time," today went the job of building the Phillies from a second-division baseball outfit to a National League pennant contender.

"Meet the new manager," was President Gerald Nugent's annoucement to newspapermen that the flashy receiver, obtained from the St. Louis Cardinals a few weeks ago, had been signed to a two-year contract as player-manager, succeeding Burt Shotton.

Shotton, manager for the last six seasons, was made a free agent, but there was no announcement of the disposition of the two years his contract still has to run. Reports were heard that he may be signed by the Cincinnati Reds, or that he might return to the Cardinals' organization.

Wilson Seasoned Veteran.

A seasoned veteran at 33, Wilson is expected to develop the Phils to a much higher rating than the seventh place which was their lot last season. He disclosed no plans today, but did acknowledge that he would take over, himself, active direction of the hurling staff, a department in which the Phils have been weak for years.

"I'm delighted at the opportunity to pilot the Phils," he said, after Nugent announced the transfer. "It's great to have such a job, particularly in your home town.

"I don't have any plans or trades in mind. I haven't had a chance to talk things over with Gerry yet. Perhaps we will do something.

"Right now, all I can say is we'll have two rules on our team. They are 12 o'clock and hustle. Players must be in by midnight and on the field they must hustle every minute.

"Since I will be playing manager, I will need two coaches. Dick Bartell will continue as captain.

To Get Acquainted.

"As far as pitchers are concerned, I'll handle them myself. I don't know much about the squad, but I'll be getting acquainted with records and performances until we leave for the South."

Wilson's elevation brings the number of playing pilots in the big leagues to a half-dozen. Along with Jimmy are Bill Terry, of the Giants; Mickey Cochrane, newly appointed manager for the Detroit Tigers; Joe Cronin, of Washington; Charley Grimm, of the Chicago Cubs, and Frankie Frisch, of the Cardinals. The list may reach eight with Lou Fonseca and Rogers Hornsby, who are on the border.

Wilson's appointment was no surprise. It had been rumored for weeks. The only question was, "How about Shotton?" It is understood the Phils will be responsible for the two years' salary—at $15,000 annually. If he signs with another club and his salary is less than what he received from the Phils, the local club will make up the difference. Wilson's salary was not disclosed.

Began With Phillies.

Wilson's rise to prominence began in 1923 when the Phils signed him for his debut in the majors after he performed with New Haven in the Eastern League. When Art Fletcher's tenure in office as Phils' pilot ended in 1926, Jimmy became acting manager for a few weeks. In 1928 he was traded to the Cardinals for First Baseman Don Hurst and Catcher Virgil "Spud" Davis. A few weeks ago he was traded back, and Davis was returned to the Cards.

Mount Airy Booters Defeat Walkersville

Frederick, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Mount Airy downed Walkersville in the county soccer league on the field of the former, before 300 spectators, 5 to 2. The field was heavy with snow which made passing next to impossible. Mount Airy outplayed the Glade Valley team, making 24 shots, against 9, one of which was turned into a goal by the winners.

Walkersville scored early in the first period on a fast kick by Conroy. Five minutes later, Mount Airy evened the count on a field goal by Straw. Mount Airy took the lead in the second period when Harrison sent a fast one across the goal line. Penn then scored one for Mount Airy and added another a few minutes later. Weigle sent one over for Mount Airy on the next play.

Walkersville's second point was made when Etzler scored on a penalty kick. The victory put Mount Airy on even terms with Middletown in the pennant race.

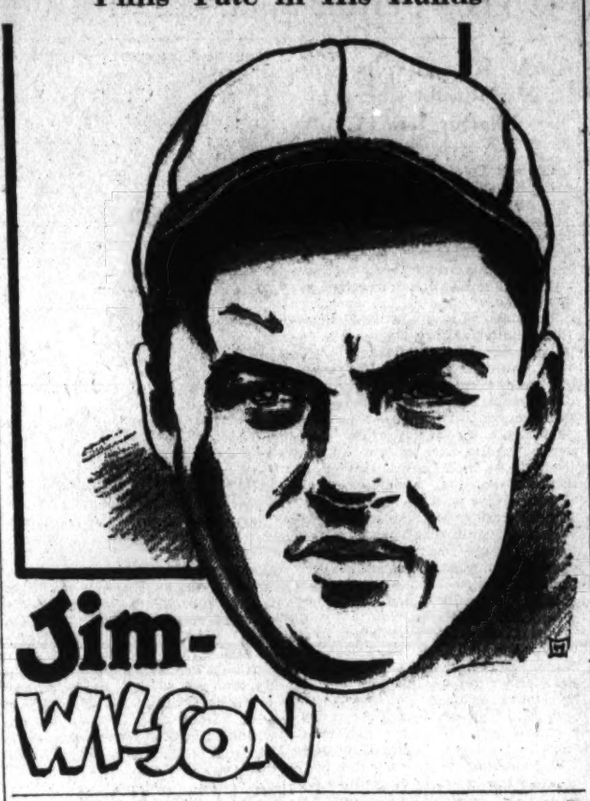
Phils' Fate in His Hands



Little Is Big on Coast

By Paul Gallico.

PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 2.—The storm is over. The sun is shining once again. It is hard to believe except for the torn trees and the occasional landslides that reached the roads that lower California has just come through its worst and most fatal rainstorm—or that Columbia beat Stanford yesterday in the Rose Bowl by the score of 7 to 0. If there is a happier couple in the land or more deserving than Lou Little and his wife, I want to see them.

The kids who won the ball game are happy but subdued. They are tired, too. Capt. Montgomery looks as though he had been in a fight. Red Matal got a bad bump over the eye from a helmete. And by the way—those football helmets the boys are wearing these days—ever have one in your fingers? They're supposed to be protective devices. But what a weapon of offense. Made of stiff, heavy leather, they are as solid and unyielding as wood.

The kids said that Stanford was the cleanest team they had played against all year. Some of them said they could have done without Wes Muller, the Stanford center, who wasn't exactly playing parlor football. But the Stanfords were leaning over backwards to play it clean. Every so often, they told me, Bill Corbus, captain of the team and all-American guard, would call across, "Everything all right, Monty?"

The starting Columbia lineup was outweighed on an average of 17 pounds to a man. The Stanford men got tired first, but the Columbians said that they were a little fatigued themselves when the final whistle blew and that they were happy that the time had come at last when they didn't have to hit big gugs in the bisly and knock them down, or for that matter, have the big gugs reverse the procedure. The Lion team said that Bones Hamilton was the best man on the field for Stanford and the hardest to stop, and that Bobby Grayson was a terror in the zone between the two 20-yard lines, but that he was easy to stop inside the danger zone.

I see that the name of Brominski doesn't figure much in the dispatches. Let me correct that. He never carried the ball, but he sat on Topping's neck while Barabas galloped unmollested around the end on the famous hocus-pocus reverse. He blocked like a major all afternoon and his defensive work was simply superb.

Dr. Louis Little, the Eyetalian gentleman with the large proboscis

Of course the biggest football coach in the country today is old who took himself a gamble and won. Stanford beat every big football team on the West Coast with the exception of Washington. Stanford was the undisputed (except by the Trojans, whom they licked) coast champion.

Columbia was not the Eastern champion. It was just a good, small, well-drilled, intelligently coached and spirited little club, but wholly representative of Eastern football. It was good enough to concede 17 pounds and 3,000 miles and beat the coast. Wonder what Princeton was thinking of when the reports came through of what the little band of Argonauts from Columbia had done?

And listen, mates! Don't let any one tell you it was the rain that won for Columbia. The bad weather held Columbia's score don. On a dry field the Lions would have scored at least two more touchdowns. The men who played in the game said that Stanford had absolutely no pass defense. Matal told me that, on the 30-yard pass he took from Montgomery that put Columbia in a scoring position, he bumped into Grayson while faking on the play. As a result, he had to commit himself and abandon the fake, which calls for him to go straight down the field while Monty fakes to the left, and then cut sharply to the right and get the pass over near the side lines. But the collision with Grayson lost valuable seconds to the timing of the play, and he had to reveal what he was about by hustling over to the spot where Monty expected him to be. And even then the Sanford secondary couldn't defend against the pass.

scored had Norgard been at that end instead of Topping. More

Some of the coasters are hollering that Barabas wouldn't have nonsense. McDowell and Brominski would have sat on Norgard as they sat on Topping. It was two against one there and perfectly executed. All of the rest of the Stanford men ran to the wrong place. Incidentally, that was as pretty a piece of concealing and handling a wet, slimy football as you will see anywhere. There was laughter in the bowl as Barabas trotted untouched to his score—Trojan laughter.

You will hear stories that U. C. L. A. is after Lou Little to coach out here in Los Angeles. They are true. Howard Jones has the town sewed up with his Southern Californians and the University of California's Los Angeles branch would like to preciated the thought but that he wasn't intercsted, that he was dispute his place in the sun. Dr. Little told me that he aphappy and contented where he was at Columbia and expected to remain there.

to attend a lunch there engineered by Master Ralph Hewitt, one of

The young men left for the Warner Brothers studio this morning their coaches and now handling publicity for that company. They will continue on a round of festivities today and tomorrow, and head for the homeland and the adulation of New York tomorrow evening on their special train.

Certainly, they have earned the gratitude of every Eastern football enthusiast. They have not proved that Eastern football is superior to Western football. Nobody in the East would be gauche as to suggest that on the outcome of one game. But they have at least for one year shut up the insufferable bragging of the football mad Pacific Coasters. Their silence is sweet music to my ears.

West Coast Hobgoblin Is Chased by Triumph of Columbia.

Miller Has Laugh on Warner; McCracken Was Worried.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (AP).—Small boys in the East who did something wrong today aren't worrying nearly as much about father coming home from work tonight and being told about it.

For at least a year dad can't frighten the youngsters with the threat that if they're not good boys they'll be fed to one of those great big Pacific Coast football teams in the Rose Bowl when they growup.

Columbia, wiping out that hobgoblin along with Stanford in the rain and mud of Pasadena's annual pageant, had revived Eastern morale today as successfully as a man who sleeps unscathed all night in a supposedly haunted house. The university, its huge buildings vacant on Morningside Heights, hadn't begun to celebrate officially because the students are not due back from Christmas vacation until tomorrow.

Victory Cheerfully Discussed.

But coaches, football officials, and experts cheerfully discussed the Lions' 7 to 0 triumph over Stanford, pleased for Coach Lou Little, for Columbia, for Cliff Montgomery, Al Barabas, Tony Matal and the remainder of a courageous little band, but downright giddy over the restoration of Eastern gridiron prestige.

Among the chief chucklers was "Rip" Miller, of Navy, who, about the time "Pop" Warner was worrying publicly over several of the Lions getting killed, declared that Columbia not only was the best team in the East, better than either Princeton or Pittsburgh, but would beat Stanford. His remarks, sounding like a lonely cry in a wilderness of doubt, were greeted with shocking incredulity. Year after year New York has seen Stanford come East and beat the Army, St. Mary's wallop Fordham and Oregon State beat both New York University and Fordham.

McCracken Was Believer.

Herb McCracken, coach of the Lafayette eleven Columbia walloped, 46 to 6, and one of the few who believed the miracle could happen, seemed to express the feelings of most of the coaches.

"I sat by my radio," he said, "and I suffered as though it was my team out there. I was worn out when it was over. All I could feel was a tremendous admiration for those game kids, 3,000 miles away, the underdogs, lacking Stanford's sheer power but winning on smartness, alertness and drive when they had to have it.

"Columbia was the best team we saw all fall with the best balanced, trickiest offense of any team I've ever seen. Cliff Montgomery is as fine a quarter back as I ever looked at and Tony Matal a perfect end."

The play on which Barabas scored against Stanford, a reverse with a fake to Montgomery, after Cliff had taken the ball several times before from the same formation, scored a touchdown against Lafayette and also put the ball in position for a touchdown against Navy.

Montgomery Gets Credit.

"It's a good play, but nine-tenths of its effectiveness comes of Montgomery's instinct for calling it at exactly the right time," McCracken said.

"He did something against us I've never seen before. Twice he gave the signal for a punt on fourth down, then tipped off one end, and threw him scoring passes while his own team was looking for a kick."

It was McCracken's team Tommy Tomb, Columbia sub quarter back, referred to when he said in Tuscon:

"Aw, those Stanfords. They're just Lafayette in white jersies to us."

"Stanford even wore red jersies like we did," said McCracken. "No wonder Columbia won."

Wild Laurel, $34.60, Victor at Jefferson

New Orleans, Jan. 2 (AP).—Wild Laurel, a lightly regarded 6-year-old gelding from G. W. Coffey's barns, today stepped away from a large field of platers in the mile and 70-yard claiming feature at Jefferson Park.

Bounding into the lead in the final sixteenth of a mile, the Son of Wildair, winner of only one race in six previous starts at the Jefferson oval, bounded across the finish line with a length to spare over the early pace setter and another outsider, Royal Sport. Happy Lad was third in the field of ten.

All but forgotten in the wagering, Wild Laurel paid $34.60, $12.40 and $11.40 across the board. He ran the distance in 1:45 1-5, less than three seconds slower than the track record.

Tough Guys With Marbles in Their Hands

Lions Invited To Movie Studio

Dine, See Picture Made, Hear Joe Brown; Are Praised by Alumni.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2 (AP).—Yesterday was the players' day for Columbia, today belonged to the alumni. Coach Lou Little believes alumni and football players do not mix—before a game—but he turned his victorious Lions over to the old grads after the game and the oldsters and the youngsters just how good they were on New Year's Day in a rain-soaked Rose Bowl.

As a matter of fact, the alumni did not have to tell the undergraduates how good they are. First-hand information could have been obtained from a band of fighting but fumbling Stanford Indians.

Without a care in the world, the Columbians stepped out today to see something of Los Angeles and Hollywood. As if it wished to join in the celebration, the sun came back after an absence of three days and gave the visiting New Yorkers their first peep at a sunny southern California sky.

Native Sons Boast of Sun.

Few loyal native sons thought the day would come when they would boast to visitors of the sun shining for one day but there it was. And for that matter, few Californians thought Columbia had a chance to beat Stanford. Thirty-five thousand or so knew they were wrong on the football guess and a good many more believe it this morning.

This afternoon the Columbia players and coaches and the New York sport writers with the team were guests of honor at a motion picture studio luncheon and saw pictures in the making. They also heard Joe E. Brown, the big-mouthed comedian, wise crack. Joe has no football background but was a fair baseball player in his younger days.

Rasslers Subpoenaed By New York Ring Body

New York, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—The New York State Athletic Commission today conducted a preliminary questioning into the series of newspaper articles written by Jack Pfeffer, promoter. Pfeffer, subponaed by the commission, substantiated the articles appearing under his name, which, stated broadly, charged that wrestling match outcomes were prearranged. His substantiation was made under oath.

Pfeffer will appear before the commission again next Tuesday along with Joe "Toots" Mondt, Jack Curley, Dick Shikat, Strangler Lewis, Rudy Miller and Ed White.

Center Court Leagues in Openings

ALL of the leading amateur basket ball teams of the city are represented in the two Community Center leagues which are to inaugurate their seasons tonight and tomorrow night. Fourteen clubs will compete in the minor league and ten in the senior division.

Sholl's, Potomac Boat Club, Congress Heights, Huerich Flashes, Mount Vernon and Potomac Electric Power Co. are among the entrants in the senior group, which opens tomorrow night. Ten in all will compete.

Fourteen teams, including Olmsted Grill, Swann Service, S. A. K. Fraternity, Tremonts, Cardinals and Miller Furniture Co. will seek the minor league honors. Each team will play its divisional rivals twice and the champions of each group will clash for the Community Center championship. The schedule for the week follows:

Minor League.

Tonight—Olmsted Grill vs. Calvary Drakes, 8 p. m., McFarland Junior High School; Swann Service vs. Katsman Tailors, 9 p. m., McFarland; Tremonts vs. Simpson's Pharmacy, 8 o'clock, Roosevelt; Black Hawks vs. St. Joseph's Flashes, 9 o'clock, Roosevelt; Cardinals vs. S. A. K., 6:30 p. m., Central; Sanitary Grocery vs. Supply Eagles, 9 o'clock, Eastern.

Major League.

Tomorrow—At Roosevelt, Trinity vs. A. A. A., 8 o'clock; Sholl's vs. Huerich Flashes, 9 o'clock; at Central, Congress Heights vs. Mt. Vernon, 7:30 o'clock; Bureau of Standards vs. Potomac Electric Power Co., 9:30 o'clock.

Saturday—At Eastern, A. A. A. vs. Potomac Boat Club, 9:30 o'clock.

Experts Hail Frankie Parker As Potential Davis Cup Star

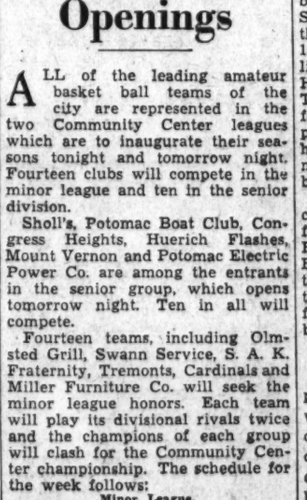
Junior Champion Not One-Shot Player, Has Only Few Flaws.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Frankie Parker's victory in the National Junior Indoor, coming after his excellent showing in the Outdoor Senior Circuit, has made him the most talked-of new Davis Cup possibility for 1934.

Actually Parker's cause was given impetus not so much by the winning of the junior but by the manner in which he swept through a creditable field without the loss of a set. Only twice did he lose as many as four games in a single set, and only in one set, the final one of the tourney, was he forced to extra games.

The Milwaukee youngster drew a bevy of experts to each of his matches including such keen critics as Bill Tilden and Vincent Richards. These past masters of the game along with the casual critics were able to find but precious few flaws in his game. Unlike some of our Davis Cup timber, notably Frank Shields, who depends largely upon volleying, Parker is not a one-shot player.

Parker's only weakness, as Tilden points out, is that his forehand, owing to his grip, lacks power and certainty. Parker employs the continental grip which puts the emphasis on the backhand and tends to make the shots off the right side less potent.



FRANKIE PARKER.

It is Tilden's belief that Parker, to become a real success in international competition must eliminate

Navy Courtmen Drill for Opener

Only Two 1932 Regulars Available; Meet West. Maryland Saturday.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—With Yuletide holidays over, Midshipmen athletes today began to turn their attention to winter indoor activities along several lines. A busy program is ahead, but it will be well into February before all teams swing into competition.

Chief attention just now centers in the development of the basket ball team, which opens its season Saturday with Western Maryland as the opposing force, and a squad of 15 candidates today settled into a lively pace under the direction of Head Coach Johnny Wilson. The Tars will hardly be up to standard for the opener, as no games were played and few practice sessions held prior to the holiday, and this may have a tendency to cause a setback.

Moreover, the squad begins the campaign with only two regulars from last season. These are Buzz Borries and Bob Dornin, fine bets. Both are forwards, but injuries from the football season are bothering them and they will be handicapped for the inaugural. Dornin may not be able to get into action at all.

Kastein Named Captain.

Elliott Loughlin, crack all-round player and All-Eastern selection, who amassed the remarkable total of 241 points last season; Porter Bedell, captain and guard; Kastein, center, and several others were lost by graduation. Though not holding a regular berth last year, Si Randolph was elected this year's captain. Ordinarily he is a forward, but has been shifted to guard because of the strong caliber of Borries and Dornin. Other experienced players are Bob Mandelkorn, guard, and Art Decker and Walter Bayless, who will alternate at center. Coach Wilson has two clever recruits in Dan Entler and George Whitmyer, stars of last year's plebe team, who undoubtedly will see a good bit of service.

The Middies have a 13-game schedule, 3 less than last year, but the bookings include strong teams. After the shake-down with Western Maryland, January listings include the following: 13, Duke; 17, Georgetown; 20, West Virginia; 27, Penn State; 31, North Carolina.

The Tars anticipate the Georgetown set-to with more than average interest because of the deal of rivalry that exists. The Hoyas were the first team ever to meet Navy when the court game became an established sport at Annapolis. That was more than a score of years ago.

Baer Is Anxious To Start Training

Workouts Await End of Present Stage Tour.

New York, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Maxie Baer, leading contender for Primo Carnera's heavyweight title, who has been doing his recent roadwork on the primrose path, will start serous ring training soon, Ancil Hoffman, his manager, announced today.

Baer has closed his night club master-of-ceremonies engagement at a local club. Now he is rehearsing for a vaudeville act with four girls and a comedian. The act is to open in Washington on Friday.

"We're going out to my ranch in California as soon as the vaudeville engagement ends," Hoffman said. "Baer is going after the title in earnest this summer."

Golf's Winter Gold Battle Is Close

Craig Wood Far Down List; Little Change in Total Scores.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2 (AP). — Willie MacFarlane, one of the game's grandest old-timers, and the youthful, brilliant Paul Runyan are waging a close battle for gold and glory along this winter's golfing trail.

Five important winter money championships already have been decided since the big caravan loaded up with improved war clubs and started out, but the two leaders are separated in total cash winnings by only $25. Winning one title and tying for another, MacFarlane has won $2,750 to $2,725 for Runyan, who has won two and tied for first place in a third.

MacFarlane in Form.

MacFarlane, banging out his iron shots with the same brilliancy as in 1925 when he beat the famous Bobby Jones in the play-off for the National Open crown, picked up $250 in a three-way tie with Runyan and Joe Turnesa for the Mid-South Open and then routed the field with a great 288 to win top money of $2,500 in the rich Mimai-Biltmore championship drive.

Runyan won the National Capital Open, worth $600 to the winner; $250 more in the Mid-South; $875 for a third place tie in the Miami-Biltmore, and $1,000 first place money in the Pasadena Open. The White Plains, N. Y., professional was second only to Craig Wood in total money winnings last year.

Johnny Revolta, of Menominee, Mich., one of the "big five" among last winter's money winners, ranked third to date this year with cash winnings of $1,400. Tommy Armour, of Chicago, ranked fourth, with $875, while Horton Smith, of Chicago, who spreadeagled the winter field in 1929, was right behind him with a cash winning balance of $850. Craig Wood, off to a shaky start in the winter drive, was far down the list with only $93.75 to his credit. Denny Shute, British open champion and one of the big money winners a year ago, has won $475. Other leaders were Al Watrous, Detroit, $725; MacDonald Smith, New York, $600; and Ralph Guldahl, of St. Louis, runner-up to Johnny Goodman in the 1933 National open, $500.

Scoring Little Better.

Although the new rules of golf give the campaigners a slightly improved chance in bad spots, the first tournaments of the winter show no wholesale reduction in scoring. Last year, it took the winners a grand total of 928 shots to cop the National Capital, Midsouth, Miami-Biltmore and Pasadena opens; this year, they did it in 924. The big difference came in the National Capital open. Horton Smith won it in 1932 with 216 shots but playing conditions were bad with a gale blowing most scores sky high. Runyan won it in 1933 with 211 strokes under fine conditions.

Schmeling Fights Levinsky Despite Hitler Opposition

Chicago, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—The report that Chancellor Adolf Hitler would keep Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, from fighting King Levinsky or any other Jew were bitterly denied today by Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, the Chicago stadium announced.

"Hitler may not want Schmeling to fight a Jew," Jacobs was quoted as saying in a long-distance conversation from New York with the Chicago stadium, "but Hitler isn't Schmeling's manager and he isn't dictator of the boxing business. Schmeling is going to fight Levinsky whether Hitler likes it or not."

Negotiations for the Schmeling-Levinsky bout at the stadium February 16 were reopened today. Levinsky already has verbally agreed to the match. Schmeling will leave Germany for this country January 11th and on his arrival is expected to sign articles for the bout.

Bottle-fed Billie's Orphan Beats Big Field and Pays $18.80 at Tropical Park

Balaski Set Down for 10 Days

Rider Blamed for Mount Interference as Field Rounds Far Turn.

Victory Recalls Naming of Mare; Toytime Gives Balaskie Double.

TROPICAL PARK, Jan. 2 (AP).—An interesting and romantic little story was recalled here today when a 4-year-old daughter of Chilowee named Billie's Orphan, owned by F. C. McAtee, won the first race of a featureless program. The remarkably well-named filly beat a big field in easy fashion and paid $18.80 for a $2 ticket, running 6 furlongs in the fast time of 1:11 3-5. Dornoch trailed the winner by two lengths, while Tansen was nearly two additional lengths behind in the show position.

The story goes that the dam of Billie's Orphan, Billie W., died just after her filly was born. In desperation, the foal was raised practically on a bottle, with small hopes for her development. Very appropriately, the daughter of Chilhowee was named Billie's Orphan. Surprisingly enough, she began to grow and showed speed, and began her career in silks down here.

Gives Good Account of Self.

The chestnut miss displayed very creditable form, and today she returned to her old battle grounds to again give an excellent account of herself.

Lester Balaski broke Billie's Orphan on top and the filly never was headed. She did bother several horses coming to the far turn and later the stewards ordered Balaski suspended for ten days for rough riding. Tansen forced the fast pace but tired after receiving a fair sample of the winners fleetness, and the fast-closing Dornoch drove into the place position in the final drive. Billie's Orphan, however, went on about her business and was drawing farther away at the end.

Hawk Moth, with Earl Porter up, rewarded form players when she galloped home by a half-dozen lengths in the second event. Her backers were very anxious for a quarter mile of the 6-furlong trip, however. Interruption busted into a four-length lead, but she kindly ran out leaving the backstretch, and Hawk Moth rushed well out in front. Sequoia overcame a tardy beginning, to grab the place, a length and a half before The Bailiff. The winner paid $4.30.

Two Straight for Oriley.

Don Meade, latest of the jockey arrivals, lost no time riding a winner for himself. The pilot of the 1933 Kentucky Derby winner had an easy time of it guiding the $5.30 for $2 shot Oriley to that gelding's second straight victory in the third contest. Chain ran the winner to a length and a half, while saving the place from Dont Blush by a a head. Oriley went to the front after 3 furlongs and was in hand thereafter.

Golden Fate, with "Bronx Express" Coucci in the pilot house, ran to his top form in leading six other sprinters to the pay-off station in the fourth. Happy Scot, the choice, ran head and head with the winner for 5 furlongs, after which Golden Fate drew away to win by four lengths in 1:11 flat. Levaal was another four lengths out of the place. Golden Fate was a 3 to 1 chance.

Double For Balaski.

Lester Balaski, undaunted by his 10-day suspension, recorded a double in the fifth race. The New Orleans lad gave Toytime a million-dollar ride and the filly easily beat Inflate by a length and a half, returning $8.10. Cabochon was a poor third. Inflate ran with the winner until the last furlong, where Toytime moved clear under smooth handling.

Major General ran a game race under good handling by Apprentice Litzenberger to win the sixth contest. It was Owner J. E. Smallman's second success of the day. Well Built, the one to draw most of the play, finished a neck behind the winner, with Bolilee a good third. Major General was rated close to Well Built's pace until the final quarter. In a hard drive, the Major outlasted his rival in the closing strides.

Once again the combination of the B. B. Stable, Trainer Hirsch Jacobs and Apprentice Earl Porter earned a double when Fleet Flag won the last race by 2 lengths at even money. Banderlog took the place from Arab by six lengths.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The legendary Dutch boy Hans saved his countryside from disaster by thrusting his finger into a hole in the dike—but a real life hero saved the Dutch City of Leyden by cutting a hole in the dikes. This hero was William of Orange, who rescued the besieged inland city with his fleet sailing on water that had poured through the broken dikes.

Leyden had been under siege of the Spanish for a year, and the people inside the city were reduced almost to starvation by the grim army that camped about its walls. Twenty-two miles away William's fleet lay—but no army he could muster was fit to meet the Spanish forces.

In a final effort to drive out the Spanish, and to permit the fleet to deliver the city from them, the Dutch cut the dikes which held back the sea. Water poured through the gap, flooding the land between the open sea and the city, driving the Spanish army before it. The ships sailed over flooded orchards and fields, up to the city itself.

No work of art, Amherst's battered and dented statue "Sabrina" is, nevertheless, a prized possession of Amherst men. The statue, a 400-pound bronze of a nude water-nymph, was once just another statue—but after her removal from the college campus was ordered there began a fight between alternate classes for her possession.

For 40 years now the odd and even numbered classes have fought for possession of Sabrina. She is under constant care and protection. She once went to Europe to escape abduction, was once held in jail for safekeeping and has even been kept in a safety deposit vault.

3 Top-Notchers On Mat Card Tomorrow

Browning, Title Claimant, Kampfer and Dean Big Drawing Cards.

THREE outstanding build-ups of the 1933 rassling season will assign big Jim Browning in launching New Year activities at the Washington Auditorium tomorrow night, when Promoter Joe Turner resumes operations after a week's lay-off.

Although Browning (Jack Curley's nomination for the world's heavyweight championship) rests securely atop the card, Turner also lists blue ribbon workers in the respective persons of Ernie Dusek, Hans Kampfer and Man Mountain Dean.

Ernie Claims New Defense.

Hero of two sensational stands against Jim Landos, upsets of Ray Steele, Gino Garibaldi and George Zaharias and a two-hour draw with Dick Shikat this past year, the younger Dusek is hopeful of bettering his recent 52-minute stand against Browning in this re-match. A newly devised defense against Browning's airplane scissors torture, Ernie insists, materially brightens his chances.

One of the best drawing cards in the Jim Londos League since deserting the Midwest some 18 months ago, Handsome Hans Kampfer turns independent and meets George Manich in semifinal. An impressive victory for Kampfer might pave the way to a showdown with the winner of the Browning-Dusek bout.

Giant vs. Marvel.

The main preliminary clashing of the Masked Marvel and Man Mountain Dean might easily resolve itself into the evening's show stealer. Fortified with 302 pounds of bearded ferocity and one of the greatest turnstile clickers on the mat today, the elephantine Dean registered with ridiculous ease over big Joe Komar in his Auditorium debut some weeks back.

Vic Christy vies with Mike Romano and Scotty McDougall bucks Jim Clinstock in curtain lifters.

19 Court Games Left On St. John's Schedule

The St. John's Prep school basket ball team, which has already felt the sting of defeat on three occasions to date, has a heavy schedule of 19 games yet to play, including the battle with Roosevelt High School on the Ruf Riders' court this afternoon. Featured on the home card are games with Washington and Lee High of Ballston, Gonzaga and Georgetown Prep Schools, Alexandria, Georgetown Frosh and Landon School.

Games away from home include a jaunt to Baltimore, where the strong Mount St. Joseph Club of that city will be met. The schedule will wind up early in March with Mount Rainier High School on the Johnnies floor.

The schedule:

January 3, Roosevelt, away; 5, Central, away; 10, Takoma-Silver Spring, at home; 12, Alexandria, away; 16, Washington-Lee, at home; 19, Boys' Club, away; 22, Georgetown Prep, away; 26, Gonzaga, at home; 30, Emerson, away.

February 2, Washington-Lee, away; 6, Landon, at home; 10, Mt. St. Joseph, away; 12, Alexandria, at home; 16, Georgetown Prep, at home; 19, Landon, away; 23, Gonzaga, away; 26, Takoma-Silver Spring, at home.

March 2, Georgetown Frosh, at home; 6, Mount Rainier, at home.

55 Yearlings At Audley Farm

Carlaris, St. Henry Each Sires of 11 of Jones' Baby Racers.

BERRYVILLE, Va., Jan. 2.—Audley Farm, near here, owned by B. B. Jones, Oklahoma oil magnate, today had on its roster 55 yearlings who, as 2-year-olds, are expected to take to the turf in 1935.

Carlaris, son of Phalaris and Carnival, winner of the Tiajuana Derby, a Coffroth Handicap and a Coffroth preliminary and upward of $100,000 at Tiajuana in the winter of 1925-26, is the daddy of 11 of the yearlings. St. Henry, son of The Finn and Lady Sterling, a three parts brother of Sir Martin, and half brother of Sir Barton, also is represented by 11 yearlings.

Bright Knight, sire of Gallant Knight, Knight's Call and Her Grace; Sir Barton, father of Easter Stockings, Nellie Custis and They, and High Cloud, daddy of Con Amore and Hilen, are represented by seven each.

Spanish Prince Sire of Two.

Spanish Prince, sire of Mike Hall, Lucky Hour and Charley O, and Tryster, father of My Sis, Triskette, Snowy and Barn Dance, are sires of two each, and Sub Beau and Strolling Player of one apiece.

If all, or even a reasonable percentage of these youngsters race to their pedigrees and connections, Mr. Jones' stable bids fair to be powerful for several seasons. The St. Henry colt from Kiluna is an own brother of Soul of Honor, a three-parts brother of Kai Sang and a half-brother of Heskilune and Markilune, they, respectively, the dams of Green Cheese and Her Grace. The St. Henry-Irish Lassy filly is an own sister of Erin Queen.

A Carlaris-Sister Ship filly is a half-sister of Signauman, Sister Ship being an own sister of Crusader, Man o' War's most powerful son so far. A St. Henry-Tracedes colt is a half-brother of Princess Tina; the Carlaris-War News filly, a half-brother of Rocky News; a Bracadale-Cathleen in Houhilan colt a half-brother of Altmark; a Bright Knight-Ballet Dancer II filly, an own sister of Royal Blunder; a Knight-Florence Nightingale filly an own sister of Knight's Call and a half-sister of Crimson Lad, and a Sun Briar-Torque filly, an own sister of Altitude.

Dear Al: Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 2.

If you know how my selections came out today, say nothing. I will see you later. Don Meade arrived this morning, had his agent hustle him some mounts and rode out on the track to bring Oriley to the wire a winner. Meade is one of those fortunate riders who doesn't have to be careful of taking on weight. He comes from a family of small people and has a sister, his senior, who can make 98 pounds. According to Don, all the Meades always eat when they are hungry. E. R. Bradley, his boss, has no fear that weight will end the career of his star jockey, but he does insist that Don keep in action. BILL.

First race—Your guess is as good as mine in this field of baby racers, making the first starts. I'll take the Middleburg-Zeigler entry of Golden Dream and Who Back. In the first place, I'll have two running for me and, in the second place, my Virginia scouts have warned me of several good things from the Middleburg barn. No Saint is well bred and breaks off the rail. King's Pleasure for the remainder.

Second race—Blind Raferty appears to be the speed of this party of fairly evenly matched 3-year-olds. Clocker Mike has passed me a good work on thi scolt. Mervin B. and Knight's Hope to complete the money picture.

Third race — Bramble Broom shapes up well in a field of this sport. Has plenty of speed away from the gate and is reported fit and ready. God O'War is highly touted and has the stamp of approval of some clockers. Gets second call. Black Harmony for the rest.

Fourth race—Broad Meadows, a Bradleyite with Don Meade to do the riding should take care of this fair grade of sprinters if anywhere near best form. My Purchase is the one to beat. Porter's Dream slid back a bit but a rest and light weight might help tomorrow.

Fifth race—I have waited a long time for Barkentine to show in the entries. Here he is all greased and oiled. Don't ask me what I know about this one. Get on the line. Agrarian and Erebus to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Sky Haven ran a promising race last out and belongs on top of this field. A snug ride will turn the trick. Two Tricks is cheap but has worked well for this test. War Saint is heavily weighted. Has a fighting chance.

Seventh race—Everfair should show to advantage in this race. Has had a tune-up and is always dangerous among this brand. Bibby's Choice to place and Jane Ellen to show. The last named will go over with a bang at this meet. Watch out.

Community Fives Start Second Half

Having completed the first half of the games in the Southeast Community Center Basket Ball League, the six teams in Class A and eight in Class B, will start the second half with two games listed for tonight. Sigma Phi Lambda plays the Eastons at 7 o'clock and Anacostia Business Men engage the Certified Bakers at 9.

The Miller Furniture Co. five appeared to be too strong for the other five teams in Class A in the first half, winning five straight games without a defeat being registered against them. Anacostia, although having many close games in Class B, won out with six victories and but one loss.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BILLIES ORPHAN, $18.80, $14.80, $15.30; DORNOCH, $6.00, $6.40; TRANSEN, $9.60.

BILLIES ORPHAN, a rapid breaker, rushed into lead and under a steady restraint, drew out in final furlong, winning nicely in hand. DORNOCH was hustled along all the way, closed gamely and was a fast going second. TRANSEN had plenty of speed but suffered a lot of interference. PAT C. broke fast, but was crowded back but recovered and finished fast. STEEL ran a fair race. SCOTCH SOLDIER was abruptly cut out off at the far turn. QUORUM ran a miserable race, being outrun from the start. His performance was in distinct contrast to his previous race.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year olds Start poor, won easily, place driving. Went to post 2:44½. Off 2:45½. Winner, bk. f. (3), by Nocturn—Helium. Owner, B. B. Stable. Trainer, H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $360; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $15. Time, 1:12

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAWK MOTH, $4.30, $2.40, $2.20; SEQUOIA, $2.90, $2.70; THE BAILIFF, $2.50.

HAWK MOTH moved into lead after interruption, ran out on turn, opened wide gap and won easily. SEQUOIA was away poorly, worked his way up and finished fast. THE BAILIFF rushed up around turn and held on gamely. STRETCH CALL was close to the pace for entire trip. PORCEFUL, on the inside, suffered slight interference. INTERRUPTION opened wide lead in first quarter mile but ran out turning out of back stretch.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and up Start good, won easily, place driving. Went to post 3:22½. Off 3:26. Winner, b. g. (4), by Stins—Brown Beauty, 2d. Owner, G McMitchell. Trainer, J. Edwards. Value to winner, $360; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $15. Time 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ORILEY, $5.30, $3.70, $3.10; CHAIN, $11.10, $6.70; DON'T BLUSH, $23.90.

ORILEY, much the best. He handled his weight well, raced PREMEDITATE into submission, drew out in stretch and won nicely in hand. CHAIN broke fast, was kept well up and ran good game race. DON'T BLUSH, on outside of the field all the way, finished fast. KIBITZER broke good but dropped back, came around field and finished with a rush. PREMEDITATE had plenty of speed, but stopped badly at end. JUST FUN came from far back and was running very strong at end. MELOY was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse,

Stocks Enter New Year on Rising Trend

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Stocks made their entry into 1934 with quiet firmness today. A few favorites celebrated by pushing above their 1933 highs, but on the whole the market seemed cautious and extreme gains, rather moderate at best, were not fully maintained. Bonds and cotton advanced while wheat closed a little lower.

Trading was quiet, as it usually is on the eve of a Congressional session and a Presidential message. The week-end brought publication of numerous conservatively optimistic statements on business and recovery prospects for the new year.

No further light was available on monetry matters, though Wall street assumed further developments along that front could be expected.

Dollar Exchange Hardens.

Dollar exchange had an early reaction, then hardened. Europe was represented as being especially interested in President Roosevelt's message tomorrow, chiefly, of course, for what he might have to say about monetary affairs. Wall street also crowded to its listening post to hear not only the Wednesday message but the later budget statement.

Automobile and liquor shares did most of the leading. Chrysler and General Motors were particularly active, both selling above last year's high. Allied Chemical was another leader to improve on 1933's top price. American Commercial and U. S. Industrial Alcohols strengthened a couple of points before losing part of their gains.

General Electric, U. S. Steel, National Dairy, National Steel, Continental Can, General Cigar, Penney, Safeway Stores, Ingersoll Rand and Inland Steel improved fractions to a couple of points net. American Telephone fell back fractionally in the late dealings and American Can dropped a point after directors had declared the regular dividend of $1 a share. Metals eased. Rails were sluggish. The net change in the averages was a gain of one-tenth point on a turnover of 1,278,780 shares.

Trade Background Favorable

The market's trade background continued favorable. Steel production starts the week at 29.3 per cent of capacity, according to the American Iron & Steel Institute, a loss of 2.3 points from a week ago. This decrease, however, was less than is usually seen in the holiday week because of the operating spurt incident to the hasty completion of fourth-quarter contracts.

Dividend news maintained its cheerful tenor. A number of companies had postponed action until the new year so that payments declared would escape the 5 per cent Federal tax, and Wall Street is looking for further disbursements. The December dividend record was notably favorable.

American Metal Market reports a "widespread inquiry for railroad material" and says a "fair-sized movement of railroad steel from mills is expected by February." Releases against recently placed rail orders "are coming out slowly, except in the South."

Automobile production this month should expand, especially after the new models have been displayed. The industry's recent policy has been to gear output as closely as possible to demand, and 1933 is understood to have ended with many makers' stocks of old cars well cleaned up.

Latest Proposal Under Discussion for Reviving the Heavy Industries Involves About as Much Danger as Direct Lending by the Government.

By Ralph West Robey.

One can not help but have a certain admiration for the ingenuity shown by Administration advisers in thinking up trick schemes for bringing about a revival in the heavy industries. Every few days some new plan is devised, becomes the subject of extensive discussion for a short time, and then is replaced by another suggestion. Apparently anything will be considered except the one method that would assure the desired result. The process is somewhat comparable to the activities of a group of amateur chemists who, while knowing that water consists of two parts of hydrogen to one of oxygen, refuses to have anything to do with such an orthodox compound and insists upon trying out every other conceivable combination.

A week or two ago, it will be recalled, the proposal under discussion was direct lending by the Government to business organizations and individuals. It obviously was a rather fantastic plan, for it could lead only to difficulties and probably to a collapse of Government credit and our financial system. Nevertheless, for a few days the plan was seriously debated within Administration circles and for a little while it seemed that it might be tried. Fortunately for the safety of the country, it now, according to reports, has been abandoned.

Did Not Mean Government Must Keep Clear of Loans.

This has not meant, however, that the Administration has decided that it should not take an active part in getting credit extended. Quite the contrary, in fact. All that the discarding of this proposal involved was a decision that this particular scheme had so many objections that it was not acceptable. The problem remained, therefore, of getting some new plan that either with or without direct Government support would overcome these objections.

The plan that has been devised, and now is under discussion, according to reports, is for the Government merely to guarantee loans made to heavy industries. The actual lending, in other words, will be done by our commercial banks and the Administration will enter merely as a guarantor to whatever extent is necessary in order to make the loan an attractive credit risk.

Such a plan, it is held, would result in our banks making loans to the heavy industries and this in turn would lead to a revival of the one great spot in the economic system that so far has shown the least improvement. Further, so it is argued, once the improvement started the loans that now would have to be placed in the questionable category would become "sound" in their own right and the Government would not be called upon to make good its guarantee, at least in any significant amount. In other words, the plan is devised to get this section of the business structure "off dead center." Once this is done it is assumed that it will be able to take care of itself.

Only Advantage Is That Banks Make the Loans.

In only one particular does this plan offer any real advantage or safety to our financial system over the proposal that the Government make direct loans. This is that since the commercial banks would have to pass upon the desirability of the loans, there probably, even in spite of the Government guarantee, would be some restraint shown. A bank does not like to have loans "go bad" even though no loss is involved.

Aside from this, the plan is just as bad as direct lending. In the first place many of the loans that the banks would be encouraged to make would be unsuited to the portfolio of an institution holding demand deposits. Secondly, through the banks actually advancing the funds, the extent of the operation would not be reflected in the deficit of the Federal Government. It would be impossible, therefore, for the average person to follow what was going on and the extent to which the Government was getting itself financially involved. Finally, should the anticipated recovery fail to take place and the loans become bad in any appreciable volume, it almost certainly would lead to the Government taking over the banks and, to some extent, at least, the business units which were unable to meet the obligations.

Because of these reasons I think it would be extremely regrettable if the plan were adopted. Anyway, the problem could be solved so much easier if the Administration simply would remove the uncertainty that is keeping private investors from putting their funds to work. If it would do this the heavy industries would take care of themselves.

Bond Market Closes Higher In Steady Tone

Both Traders and Investors Curb Dealing; Sales, $10,444,000.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—The bond market greeted the new year with a moderate display of optimism today, and prices in most categories closed with a steady to firm tone.

Both traders and investors showed considerable restraint in the matter of substantially expanding commitments, however, and sales totaled only $10,444,000, par value, compared with $11,368,000 last Friday.

The average for 80 domestic corporate issues advanced three-tenths of a point.

Federal Loans Firm.

The resignation of Secretary Woodin because of ill health and the appointment of Acting Secretary Morgenthau to the Treasury post was in line with Wall Street's expectations and apparently was a negligible market factor.

The majority of the U. S. Government securities firmed 1-32 to 14-32 of a point, with the best improvement being registered by Treasury loans.

Scattered industrials and utilities were in demand at gains ranging from 1 to 2 or more points. Among the most active of these were maturities of American Rolling Mill, National Dairy, National Steel, Postal Telegraph, Public Service, United Drug and Western Union.

Rails Turn Spotty.

The rails were a little spotty. Advances of 1 to around 3 points were held by some liens of Boston & Maine, Canadian National, Rock Island, Delaware & Hudson, Hudson & Manhattan, Illinois Central, N. Y. Central, New Haven, Norfolk & Western, Pere Marquette and Southern Pacific.

Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville 5s and 6s, following reorganization proceedings last week, lost 12½ and 9¼ points, respectively, on a few transactions. A number of other carrier issues were a bit easier.

German obligations were the feature of the foreign section, various corporation, State and municipal issues advancing 1 to 6 points coincident with advices from Washington that American representatives in Berlin would seek to obviate the recent decision of the Reichsbank to further reduce the amount of exchange for servicing dollar bonds. Some loans of France, Argentina, Australia, Dutch East Indies, Switzerland and the United Kingdom also rallied 1 to 3 points in quiet trading.

Listed Shares Rise 10 Billions in 1933

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—The total quoted value of shares listed in the New York Stock Exchange showed a net appreciation of approximately $10,000,000,000 in 1933.

The stock exchange's compilation shows that at the beginning of 1933 there were a total of 1,311,881,157 shares listed, which at that time had an aggregate quoted value of $22,767,636,718.

On December 1, last, there were listed 1,295,027,915 shares, and the total quoted value then was $32,542,456,452. No compilation has been made since December 1, but price averages indicated that the market finished December a little above the levels of the start of the month.

Tobacco Market to Open.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 2 (AP).—Tobacconists said today that unless unexpected developments arise the Lynchburg dark-fired tobacco market will open on January 9. They said, however, that the date had not been definitely determined.

Bon Ami Votes Extra Dividend Of Fifty Cents

United Verde Mine Declares Return of 25 Cents.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Directors of Bon Ami Co. today declared an extra dividend of 50 cents on the Class "B" stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of the same amount, both payable January 17 to stock of record January 13. The usual quarterly payment of $1 on the "A" shares was also voted, payable January 31 to holdings of record January 16.

United Verde Extension Mining Co. today declared a dividend of 25 cents compared with previous quarterly distributions of 10 cents. The dividend is payable February 1 to stock of record January 9.

With December continuing the favorable trend of the past five months, the 1933 record on dividend declarations stands at 807 cases of increased, resumed or extra payments, against 1,405 unfavorable actions, the Standard Statistics Co. reports. In 1932 there were 559 favorable revisions and 2,768 adverse actions. For December the favorable announcements numbered 149 the largest for any single montn since 1930, and comparing with 57 unfavorable actions.

Cannon Mills Co. declared an extra of 15 cents and a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents, both payable January 20 to stock of record January 12.

Phillips Petroleum Co. today declared a dividend of 25 cents, its first disbursement since January 2, 1931, when a quarterly payment of 50 cents was made. The dividend is payable February 15 to holdings of record January 12.

Armour & Co. released a consolidated income statement today showing that its Illinois and Delaware Corporations and their subsidiaries earned a net profit in 1933 for the first time since 1930.

President T. G. Lee, in the statement, reported that the net income of the various Armour units was $8,121,641, up $11,979,206 over 1932. At the end of that fiscal year the companies showed a loss of $3,857,565.

Sales, shown in tons, were 10 per cent greater in 1933 than in 1932. Their dollar value, however, amounted to $452,000,000 as compared to $468,000,000 in 1932. The change was credited to lower prices.

Per share earnings of corporations reporting during the past week with comparisons with the previous year included the following:

The Markets at a Glance

What The Stock Market Did.

	Tue.	Sat.
Advances	382	359
Declines	171	93
Unchanged	120	145
Total issues	673	597

Stocks—Quiet firmness marked trading as stocks entered the new year on a higher trend. Some favorites celebrated by pushing above their 1933 highs. The market, as a whole, was cautious, and gains averaged one-tenth of a point. Sales totaled 1,278,780 shares.

Bonds—Loans greeted 1934 with gains and a steady tone. Traders and investors curbed commitments. Advances averaged three-tenths of a point. Sales reached $10,444,000.

Curb—Small advances were recorded as the year opened. Alcohols led the rising group. Some scattered selling trimmed the gains. Sales volume declined from Friday's to 208,000 shares.

Wheat—Early rallies were lost and wheat closed under Saturday's finish. Traders held back, waiting for Roosevelt's message to Congress. Oats and corn were up. May wheat sold at 84⅞; July at 83⅞.

Cotton—Prices were steadier. An opening advance was followed by reactions under realizing and scattered selling, but prices stiffened up again in late trade buying combined with scattering commission house demand. March sold at 10.42. The general market advanced 15 to 20 points. January sold at 10.28.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed steady, 5 higher to 5 lower. January sold at 8.90; March at 9.17.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged and stood at 2.30; refined sold at 4.30.

Coffee—Spot coffee demand was quiet. Santos No. 4 sold at 9½; Rio No. 7 at 8⅜.

Silver—Bar silver was firm. It sold in New York, ¼ higher, at 44⅞ cents per ounce.

Gold—Bar gold in the United States was unchanged and stood at $34.06 per ounce. It sold in London at 127 shillings.

Dollar—The United States dollar lost on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.15 to the English pound; 6.21½ cents to the French franc, and $37.77 to the German mark.

Curb Records Mild Advance As Year Opens

Alcohols Lead in Upswing as Sales Drop to 208,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—The curb market taged a mild advance in its initial session of the new year today. The list moved steadily forward until the last hour, when scattered selling pared gains.

Alcohols were active on the advance and closed fractions to 2 points higher. A number of specialties gained moderately, but metals were a trifle easy. Oils were steady to fractionally higher.

Hiram Walker halved a 4-point advance. General Tire & Rubber rose 2 in a small transfer. Issues showing net improvement of sizable fractions to around a point or so included Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Canadian Industrial Alcohol A, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Distillers - Corporation - Seagrams Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Parker Rust Proof, Humble Oil and Allied Mills. Lake Shore Mines, Newmont and American Gas & Electric yielded around a point.

Transfers approximated 208,000 shares, compared with 271,000 last Friday.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—American Machinist says the machinery trade is facing 1934 "more hopefully than it has faced any new year since 1929." Inquiries in the past few weeks have been accompanied by statements that "orders would follow after January 1, and there is reason to believe that the statements were sincerely made."

Chesapeake & Ohio Railway's freight loadings last week, which included Christmas, totaled 20,018 cars, against 23,902 the previous week and 19,141 a year ago.

November net operating income of the Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville was $7,456, against $35,299 in the same 1932 month.

Sales of new issues of Canadian bonds during 1933 amounted to $529,219,246, compared with $467,695,475 in 1932, according to records compiled by the Dominion Securities Corporation.

The International Tin Research Council estimates world tin consumption for the first ten months of 1933 at 108,655 tons, compared with 83,080 tons for the corresponding period in 1932. The United States used 52,251 tons in this period, compared with 29,397 the previous year.

Imports of Iron And Steel Decline

Imports of iron and steel products into the United States during November amounted to 28,979 tons, as compared with 46,673 tons imported in October and 34,924 tons for November, 1932, according to figures compiled in the Commerce Department's iron and steel division.

Canada, the report shows, continued as the chief source of United States imports of iron and steel products, supplying 13,264 tons or 46 per cent of the total during November. Other outstanding sources were Belgium, India, Germany and Sweden.

Imports of iron and steel products during the first 11 months of the current year totaled 383,480 tons, compared with 349,024 tons for the corresponding period of 1932. Pig iron has constituted the leading item in this trade, accounting for 37½ per cent of total receipts.

Foreign Markets.

London, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The stock exchange started the year with a cheerful tone. Business was good, with Kaffirs and rubber shares improving the most, the latter on restriction hopes. Industrials and gilt-edged securities benefited from investment buying, owing to optimistic New Year forecasts. The market closed steady.

Paris—Firmness of leading issues following Saturday's advance in Wall street caused prices to hold generally steady. French stocks gained slightly, while international issues were irregular. The closing was steady.

Berlin—Quotations on the boerse opened firm, with trading active. Failing to sustain its slight gains, the market closed unsettled.

Cotton Gains After Drop in Early Trading

January Closes at 10.28 as General Market Rises 15 to 20 Points.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—The steadier tone noted in cotton during the closing days of the old year was in evidence again today. An opening advance was followed by partial reactions under realizing and scattered selling, but prices stiffened up again in the late trading on covering and trade buying combined with a scattering commission house demand.

March contracts, after selling off from 10.41 to 10.35, advanced to 10.43 and closed at 10.42, with the general market very steady at net advances of 15 to 20 points.

Initial prices were 14 to 15 points higher in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables, the easier ruling of the dollar in the foreign exchange markets, and the more optimistic views of the business outlook as reflected in annual trade and financial reviews.

After January eased off to 10.20 and May to 10.52, or about 5 to 9 points down from the early high, a resumption of trade demand and some further commission house buying steadied the market, and closing quotations were within a point or two of the best for the day.

Exports today, 9,039, making 4,200,401 so far this season. Port receipts, 5,912. United States port stocks, 4,098,918.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was steady today with only a small trade, on scattered covering and commission house buying, promoted by the firmness of cotton, corn and hogs, and the steadiness of crude oil. Final prices were 7 points net higher. Sales were 11 contracts all in the July position. Bleachable spot nominal; January closed, 4.40; March, 4.65; May, 4.85; July, 5.05.

U. S. Dollar Weakens on Foreign Marts

London, Jan. 2 (AP).—The United States dollar weakened 1⅜ cents to the pound today, closing at $5.18½ to the pound.

Trading was light in foreign exchange. Speculators await with interest the opening of the American Congress and its attitude on possible currency changes.

The dollar opened at $5.15½, following the close yesterday at 5.15⅛.

Gold currencies were active, the French franc closing at 83.09 to the pound.

A decline of 31 centimes was shown by the dollar on the Paris market, it closing at 16.02 francs (6.24 cents to the franc), in comparison to Saturday's close at 16.33 france (6.12 cents to the franc).

In Berlin the dollar sold at 2.64 marks (37.87 cents to the mark). Saturday's quotation was 2.69 marks (37.17 cents).

U. S. Banking Begins Era of Reconstruction

Tax Lifting and Guaranteeing of Deposits Among New Moves.

(Associated Press.)

A new banking era began Monday with a new year that opened speculative vistas of new financial moves and closed an epoch stamped indelibly with a Nation-wide bank holiday.

Lock-stepped with the new 1934 is a national insurance of deposits in more than 13,000 institutions—99 per cent of all banks, according to Jesse Jones, Reconstruction Corporation chairman, and 97 per cent of all bank accounts in the estimate of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Outstanding also is a new year's offering of Government help for banks with surplus funds. Simultaneously taxes bringing in $300,000,000 annually are lifted.

Dollar Program Pushed.

Still closely veiled amid other developments, President Roosevelt's monetary program moves toward its commodity dollar goal. Gold buying is scheduled to continue—may possibly expand—and silver coinage under the international agreement is in its infancy.

Jones announced the RFC's plan of "cooperating with the banks which have issued preferred stock to the RFC." He explained:

"The RFC has authorized the purchase of more than $800,000,000 in preferred stock and capital notes in approximately 4,500 banks. * * * It is the purpose of the RFC to continue its preferred stock program until all banks in the United States have had an opportunity to put themselves in a strong capital position. * * *

"Credit must be available if agriculture and industry are to prosper. * * * As a means of cooperating with the banks which have issued preferred stock to the RFC despite their large surplus investment funds, the RFC is offering them its 2¼ per cent debentures * * * maturing December 15, 1935. These debentures are fully and unconditionally guaranteed both as to interest and principal by the United States."

Release of Banks.

Jones' statement followed close after a Presidential proclamation turning back to State officials control of hundreds of State banks over which Mr. Roosevelt extended Federal control when he declared the National bank holiday March 6.

This same proclamation, which closed the doors of all banking institutions until they gradually began to reopen March 13, also stopped gold payments. The gold ban never has been lifted. It has instead been strengthened to bring within reach of the Treasury virtually all monetary gold.

The taxes vanishing today are those levied to service the public works bond issue. Estimated to raise $212,000,000 annually, they include one-half cent a gallon on gasoline, 5 per cent on dividends and $1 for every $1,000 of corporation capital stock. In the first five months, however, these levies actually returned $129,153,000, a rate better than $300,000,000 a year. In their stead will be new taxes on distilled spirits, centering around a $2 a gallon tax on liquor.

Bank Deposits Guaranty.

The bank deposit guarantee was made effective Monday on deposits up to $2,500 in all qualifying institutions. The 5,950 Federal Reserve members participate automatically, and of 7,750 State banks applying, it is understood less than 2 per cent failed of acceptance after liberal RFC aid for those needing it.

After July 1, deposits up to $10,000 will be guaranteed in full, those up to $50,000 will be 75 per cent insured and those above 50 per cent. The banks contribute one-half of 1 per cent of their insurable deposits in the guarantee fund, the Treasury $150,000,000 and the Reserve banks approximately $140,000,000.

New and heavy Government appeals to the money market are indicated by the relatively small cash expenditures as compared with recovery allotments already made. Estimates of new security issues range into the billions without counting still more funds required to meet the spring maturities.

The public debt already stands at $28,823,000,000, practically the 1921 level, as compared with the peak of $25,484,506,000 in 1919 and the post-war low of $16,185,000,000 in 1930. The White House has publicly indicated Government expenditures in the 1934 fiscal year will be "way over" receipts.

Antietam Park Study Seeking Data on Battle

CWA Financing Survey to Increase Knowledge of Civil War Clash.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—A survey of the Antietam Battlefield, aimed at for establishing an educational program for using military National parks to teach American history just as the National Park Service uses the parks of the West to teach natural history, has been started at Sharpsburg, near here, by 15 men, headed by Maj. Joseph W. Byron, who is in charge of the historical research work in a volunteer capacity.

The survey, one of the most energetic of its kind ever attempted, is being done through the Civil Works Administration.

Besides Maj. Byron, who with his father, the late Brig. Gen. Joseph C. Byron, a classmate of Gen. John J. Pershing and who made a long military study of the battle and prior events, those associated in the survey are:

Clarence L. Nett, superintendent of the Antietam Battlefield, who has direct charge of the project; Dr. R. B. Jones and Dr. James B. Wolf, both battlefield historians, in charge of the historical work in this area, which includes the battlefields of Gettysburg, Antietam, Monocacy and Fort McHenry; James R. McConaghie, superintendent and supervisor of both Gettysburg and Antietam; J. William Schnebly and John O'Connell, Hagerstown engineers and map makers.

Others Taking Part.

Thomas L. Loy, Hagerstown, is in charge of the historical research crew, which is composed of the following: Merle Kaetzel, Jordan Bean, Carlton Godlove, all of Hagerstown; Langdon Bachus, Brownsville, and Calvin Mumma, Sharpsburg. Two stenographers, Misses Frances Poffenberger and Ida Mongan, Sharpsburg, are assisting.

A thorough reconaissance of the field of Antietam is being made to provide the following information: Present condition of the battlefield; how the battlefield differs today from 1862, and fundamental studies which can be used in future development.

Pamphlets Planned.

For educational purposes pamphlets will be distributed and maps and charts prepared for a display room for Antietam.

The researchers are checking libraries, private collections, interviews with survivors of the battle and old newspapers. The survey would have been simplified had it been possible to obtain complete newspaper files here during the period prior to and following the battle, but these were destroyed during a raid by angry citizens upon the newspaper plant here during the war because of alleged leanings of the editor toward one side. These files were burned and the newspaper office wrecked. As a result, an appeal has been made to any persons having old newspapers during that period that contain references to the battle.

Nearby Wheat Farmers Paid $30,918 by U. S.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Wheat payments totaling $30,918 to farmers of surrounding counties were announced by the Farm Administration under the cash benefit plan of acreage reduction.

Bids, Too High, Rejected On All-American Canal

Dr. Elwood Mead, chief of the Bureau of Reclamation, said last night all bids on construction of the all-American Canal had been rejected because they were too high, according to the Associated Press.

He said a decision as to whether the work would be readvertised would await the arrival here later this week of the bureau's district engineers.

Institute Post Given To Huntington Woman

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed Mrs. Mary Vincent Clark, of Huntington, W. Va., a member of the board of advisers of the Federal Industrial Institute for Women at Alderson, W. Va., according to the Associated Press.

Marie Dressler Humor Fatal to Danville Man

Danville, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—The body of Thayer Prescott Gates, 53, efficiency expert at the Dan Rivers Mills was sent today to Lowell, Mass., his former home, for burial. He died last night in a Richmond theater while laughing at the humor of Marie Dressler in a film.

Counterplot

-:- Radio Waves and Ripples -:-

COL. U. S. GRANT 3d has been chosen to introduce a radio program memorializing the birth of Gen. Robert E. Lee January 19.

It's up to the editorial writers to seize upon this picture as ample opportunity to observe how dead the old antagonism between the North and South has become. That's their business. We might, however, tip them off to one thing. The organizations that are arranging the broadcast—the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Daughters of the Confederacy, &c.—are keeping themselves pretty well in the background, waiting, apparently, some sign of public approval before acknowledging the idea as their own.

As for the program itself—a dramatization of Lee's decision to cast his lot with the Confederacy—no pains have been spared for realistic presentation. First, there was the matter of Gen. Lee's voice. With such examples as Columbia's March of Time before them, the ladies and the gentlemen were determined that while the man playing the part of Lee might not look like him, he should at least have his voice.

Having made that decision, the ladies and gentlemen soon wished they were giving a pageant, instead. The Civil War period being a little early for recording devices, the ladies and gentlemen looked about for some time before finding some one who could remember how the general's voice sounded. That search finished, they began another in a new direction. Dennis Connell was ultimately selected as possessing a voice acceptable to the person who recalled Lee's.

Others of the cast of "The Three Swords of Lee" include John Shellis, narrator; Marvin Beers, Margaret Frawley, Justin Winkle, Anne Ives, Hall Hopper, Robert D'Orsey, James Gilman and Charles Brooks.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Opening of Congress broadcast from House and Senate, 12:15 p.m.; first broadcast of the Babe Ruth Boys Club program, 5 p. m.; Baron Munchausen and "Sharlie" return to the air, 8 p. m.; Helen Ford, actress, guest star of Troubadours, 9 p. m.

WMAL—Opening of Congress, noon; John McCormack offering his own arrangements of "Minnelied," "The Meeting of the Waters," and "The Lepreahaun," 9:30 p. m.; Jules Stein's orchestra, 11:30 p. m.

WJSV—Opening of Congress, noon; "Is Our Climate Becoming Milder?" Dr. J. B. Kincer, U. S. Weather Bureau, 4:30 p. m.; "The Prize Song," a violin arrangement of the aria from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," played by Albert Spalding, 8:30 p. m.

This young lady sends a warm Southern voice down Columbia lines with Glen Gray's orchestra tomorrow night at 10. Irene Taylor is the name.

Elder Michaux is getting a new automobile.

The present one is practically worn out from carrying the Devil Chaser to weekly services in Norfolk and Baltimore and to occasional gatherings of his flock in New York's Harlem. The good people of his congregations, including the members of his Church of God here, are pooling their spare assets to buy it.

WMAL Breakfast Clubman Arthur Godfrey understands his politics. Following Ben Bernie's broadcast from the Willard last night, Clubman Godfrey handed the maestro a sheaf of letters, each one pleading strongly for the bandman's appearance on a Breakfast Club program this week.

Shirley Howard and the Jesters will be found on the air a half hour later tonight, N. B. C. having changed their time to 7:30 o'clock.

Cooking cabbage without an odor is only one—but not the least—of the accomplishments of N. B. C.'s Mysterious Chef, who goes back on a WJZ chain this morning at 9 o'clock.

According to National's publicity department, the Mystery Chef, an internationally known yachtsman, horseman and globe trotter, has cooked every meal for himself and the missus for 22 years.

He quoted:

"There is a tremendous thrill to be gotten out of the kitchen stove and there is nothing difficult or mysterious about wonderful cooking. It is like putting two and two together to make four. The most delicious dishes usually are the simplest to make."

One of these days we'll read that to the little woman . . . and duck.

The Pickens Sisters will be with Paul Whiteman and Deems Taylor again tomorrow night, this time in a special arrangement of Rachmaninoff's "Prelude."

The Radio Joe program tomorrow night will go on the air from WRC, though Joe's boys, Barytone Fred East and Tenor Bill Raymond will perform in WMAL studios.

WOL's scheme for gathering listeners' names began on yesterday's Musical Clock program. Three phone operators were kept busy recording names and addresses of persons requesting favorite songs. The minds were pretty well satisfied with tabulation of a little more than 100 names.

A gentleman by the name of Den Jeny fighting one called Young Terry, in Trenton, N. J., tonight will be aired by WOL from 9:30 to 10:30 o'clock.

Work Begins Next Week On Lynchburg Pipe Line

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—The water department will start work next week replacing 50,000 feet of redwood pipe with castiron pipe. The work is to be financed by the sale of $450,000 in water department bonds to the Federal Government, which will make a grant of about $150,000 for the project. About 250 men to be employed will live in tents on the site.

Job Agents to Confer At Clarksburg Friday

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—The managers and other officials of 21 branches of the National Reemployment Service in the northern half of the State will confer here Friday.

James M. McGinnis, of Charleston, State director of the service, has arranged the meeting. C. Guy Crigler, of Fairmont, northern district manager, will preside. Problems confronting officials in their efforts to put men and women back to work will be discussed.

Park Contests In Rockingham Given to Board

Five Removed From Court Docket, and Put Up to Arbitrators.

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Five contested cases in Rockingham County relating to lands for the Shenandoah National Park today were submitted to arbitration, W. C. Armstrong, of counsel for the Conservation Commission, announced tonight.

These cases had been set for trial in the Rockingham Circuit Court on January 2, 3 and 4 at the instance of the property owners.

The cases were stricken from the court docket and then docketed before the board of park arbitrators. Dates for the hearings have not been fixed by the board.

Contested cases remain on court dockets in only three of the eight counties in the park area.

Baby Sue Recovering From Brain Operation

Baltimore, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Five-months-old Sue Trammel, of Houston, Tex., was reported recovering satisfactorily today from a delicate operation for removal of fluid from her brain. This was the baby brought here by plane from Texas by James Wedell.

Doctors at Johns Hopkins Hospital described the operation as a "complete success" and said the child should be able to go home in two weeks.

Store Fire Victim Buried.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held at Bethel Church today for Mrs. Henry W. Davis, 52, fatally burned at her Cascade, Md., home Saturday evening. Her clothes ignited as she placed wood in the cook stove.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Truth.

A missionary, in old days, long labored with the heathen jays who frequented a torrid land, composed of heat and flies and sand. He was so honest and sincere, the heathen to his rede gave ear, and he became the biggest thing in all their land, next to the king. He tried to make them understand the wonders of his native land; he told of wonderful machines men used for canning pork and beans; of telephones, by which you sent your voice across a continent; of many things so strange and weird the heathen laddies sometimes feared the good man was inclined to feel like giving truth a rotten deal. But soon their faith revived again; he surely was the best of men, and he would sooner lose a tooth than monkey with the sacred truth. And so they swallowed all his tales, these unsophisticated males. One day he said, "In winter time, in my beloved and native clime, the rivers freeze so hard and thick a wagon with a ton of brick might go across and would not sink—" The heathen then sat down to think. They'd stood for much from him who preached, but now the limit had been reached. A yarn like that could not be true; their confidence went up the flue. The missionary from that date was loathed and scorned, an outcast skate. The truest story he had told was more than heathen craws could hold.

Unsigned Laws Go Into Effect In W. Virginia

Time Is Up for Governor to Act; Counties Aided by Measures.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—The time limit having expired without signatory approval being given by Gov. H. G. Kump, eight new laws enacted at the special session of the State Legislature have become effective.

By provisions of one, capitation taxes hereafter are to be paid into the State auditor's office by county assessors without first deducting their fees as has been the practice heretofore. Another act makes technical changes in the law permitting municipalities to borrow PWA funds for new sewer construction. The Kanawha County Court is enabled by another one to borrow PWA funds for a poor house. The law on recording of liens on property for money borrowed for taxes is revised by another one.

In four other statutes, Wetzel County is empowered to borrow PWA money for constructing a hospital near New Martinsville; Tucker County is authorized to borrow PWA money for high school gyms at Parsons and Thomas; Doddridge County is enabled to borrow for a high school at West Union, and Barbour County is empowered to transfer money from its road fund to its general fund.

Pear-Apple Developed.

Champoeg, Oreg. (U.P.).—A pear-apple is the latest development of Frank E. Osborne, local horticulturist. The fruit is a true apple, but its shape and flavor resembles a pear.

Man Without a Country Adopts U. S. as Homeland Hopes Fade

Georgetown U. Professor, Russian Refugee, Obtains Papers.

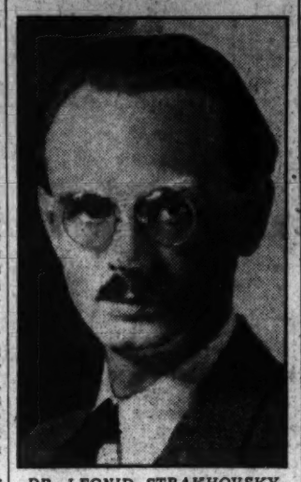
The Man Without a Country—not the hero of Edward Everett Hale's saga, but Dr. Leonid Strakhovsky of Georgetown University—found a permanent home yesterday.

Born the scion of an old Russian family and a refugee from the Bolshevik forces at the close of the post-war campaigns of the White Army, Strakhovsky came to this country several years ago to teach European political and diplomatic history at Georgetown.

Hoping the old order eventually would return to Russia, he refused to take out papers in any other country. A few years ago, however, he concluded the Soviet government was going to last some time and applied for United States citizenship. Yesterday he became an American citizen.

His career includes decorations for bravery in the World War, participation with the French Foreign Legion against the Soviets in north Russia on the Archangel and Murmansk fronts, a 200-mile escape across frozen Russia to Finland on skiis and a part in the Wrangel expedition to the Crimea.

As a scholar, Dr. Strakhovsky has received several degrees and the Order of Leopold II (Belgian) for his work. He speaks several languages fluently and is acquainted with the Japanese and Chinese tongues. He is a nephew of Prof. Michael Rostoneff, Yale authority on the ancient world.



DR. LEONID STRAKHOVSKY, for many years a real "man without a country," who became an American citizen yesterday. He is on the Georgetown University faculty.

Berlin Delays Reply to Paris' Arms Rebuff

Friendly Note Is Believed to Have Suggested New Proposals.

Berlin, Jan. 2 (AP).—Germany's reply to France's refusal to grant armament demands made by Chancellor Hitler will not be forthcoming for several days, it was indicated today.

A convention of Nazi leaders first will study the refusal, contained in an aide-memoire submitted to Hitler yesterday by the French Ambassador.

Semiofficial sources said the memoire was couched in a "courteous and friendly tone."

Paris, Jan. 2 (AP).—France's firm "no" to German demands for rearmament, as given Chancellor Hitler yesterday in Berlin, was understood in diplomatic circles today to have left open the door to counter-proposals from Germany.

The French Foreign Office was anxiously awaiting a German reply before the League Council meeting January 15 in Geneva or, at least, before the disarmament bureau session January 21.

France hopes that at one of these meetings there may be reached either an agreement with Germany or a flat rejection. In either case, France feels that the problem should be thrashed out in the League of Nations.

Simon in Rome.

Rome, Jan. 2 (AP).—Sir John Simon, foreign secretary of Great Britain, was here tonight ready for an interview with Premier Mussolini on international affairs — notably the question of disarmament.

Il Duce, as proponent of a plan for reformation of the League of Nations in order to grant equality for Germany, is regarded in diplomatic quarters as certain to discuss with Sir John the present Franco-German impasse over the question of Germany's demand for equality in armaments.

Two Indicted for Theft Of Police Patrol Car

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 2 (AP).—George G. Shackleford, previously arrested in connection with liquor law violation, and Clyde Baker, who also gave the name of John Brown, were indicted by the grand jury today for the theft of a police patrol wagon. Many gallons of liquor were hauled to a police station in the wagon, as well as a police revolver.

The theft of the police patrol and load of liquor occurred after the driver was disarmed.

Edwin M. Williams Sues Thaw, 'Broadway Playboy,' for Salary

Washington Writer Says He Wasn't Paid for Biography.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Harry K. Thaw, "playboy of Broadway," who spends much time at his country estate, Kenilworth, near here, has been sued in Circuit Court of Frederick County here for $200, for alleged unpaid salary, by Edwin M. Williams, Washington historian, whom Thaw employed to write a story of his life.

Thaw is alleged to have entered into contract with Williams to write at a salary of $100 per week. No time was stipulated for the completion of the work. The contract was signed on October 2, 1933, and Williams began work on the biography shortly thereafter.

After six weeks, Thaw is alleged to have told Williams his services were no longer needed. Thaw is alleged to have paid Williams for four weeks' work, but declined to pay for the other two weeks.

Thaw purchased Kenilworth as a country estate some years ago and since that time has spent much of his time there. He is seen frequently on the streets of Winchester. He is a member of the Charley Rouss Fire Company and often marches with the firemen on parade.

Louis Catogni Rites Set at Roanoke Today

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Louis Catogni, Roanoke business man who retired in 1920, will be conducted here tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the First Presbyterian Church, by Dr. Robert A. Lapsley, jr. Mr. Catogni came to Roanoke in 1888 and started a grocery business on Railroad avenue, then a leading business street. Later he enlarged his store and acquired a new location.

He died in Florida, where he had maintained a winter home since his retirement.

Canadian Rum Imports Mount

7,500,000 Gallons Thus Far Brought Into U. S. for Blending Use.

(Associated Press.)

Permits for the admission of 7,500,000 gallons of Canadian whisky already have been issued by the Federal Alcohol Control Administration and the total probably will exceed 10,000,000 during the next four months.

This is aged rye and bourbon whisky of a character required by American distillers for blending, and is being admitted without any fixed trade concessions on the part of the Canadian government, although American officials are conferring with Canadian authorities and it is believed likely that Canada will voluntarily extend some trade favors.

Whisky from the Irish Free State also is being licensed freely, with the Dublin government extending its purchases of wheat and other American agricultural products in return for the liberal treatment given its liquor.

People can take advantage of your offer the same day it appears in a Post Classified Ad. Phone National 4205.

Couzens Takes Detroit Helm

City "in Red" Inducts Its Youngest Mayor for "Tough Job."

Detroit, Jan. 2 (AP).—Facing what political friends and foes alike concede to be a "tough job," Frank Couzens, 31-year-old son of Senator James Couzens, became Mayor of Detroit today, the youngest chief executive the city has ever had.

The younger Couzens became acting mayor last spring upon the resignation of Frank Murphy to become Governor General of the Philippines. He resigned last fall and became a candidate in his own right.

With the city government far "in the red," his problems are largely financial. For months, the city has been meeting much of its pay roll in scrip. It is estimated that $23,000,000 more must be issued during the next six months to meet pay rolls, and the law says $18,000,000 is the limit.

Judge Frees Mother Held for Kidnaping

Chicago, Jan 2 (AP).—Mrs. Geraldine Reynolds Dutton, stunt flyer, defeated to day the attempt of her estranged husband, Ralph, to force her to return to Syracuse, N. Y., on a charge of kidnaping their child from Dutton's home.

Despite approval of her extradition by Gov. Horner, Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan today freed Mrs. Dutton on a habeas corpus writ.

New Bus Line Opened From Luray to Capital

Richmond, Va., Jan. 2 (AP).—Virginia State lines, on the basis of a State corporation commission order, today inaugurated a new passenger bus service from Luray, Va., to Washington by way of Sperryville, Washington, Va., and Warrenton.

The line already operates buses from Lynchburg by way of Charlottesville to Washington and from Harrisonburg, through Charlottesville to Richmond.
